Next Move For Court House Is Loan Acceptance

County Commissioners Are Awaiting Papers To Be Sent From Washington

ACTION CAME EARLIER THAN WAS EXPECTED

Location To Be Taken Up
After Loan Has Been Accepted

Although expecting that the public works administration would approve the request of Lawrence county for $780,000 with which to build a new court house, the county commissioners were agreeably surprised yesterday at the prompt action of the board.

In view of the large number of requests under consideration, it was believed that the request for Lawrence county's appropriation would not likely be reached for several weeks. The fact that it was given such prompt consideration is taken as evidence that the project was one which met with the hearty approval of the public works administration.

Need Prompt Action.
Dispatches from Washington stated that in order for Lawrence county to get this money, it would be necessary for the county to take prompt action. There are certain forms which have to be filled out by the county commissioners, indicating their acceptance of the funds. These forms had not arrived at the county commissioners office this morning. Until they do not official action can be taken, but the commissioners stated this morning that they will be given prompt consideration as soon as they arrive.

PA NEW OBSERVES

In a couple of weeks another large class will be graduated from the New Castle senior high school. The mid-year graduating classes have been increasing steadily, until nearly 200 will receive diplomas at the ceremonies on January 26. The pageant type of commencement program which was presented at the two previous commencements has apparently been shelved by the high school as the program is reverting to the old type of having an educator address the class.

Lawrence county commissioners now have nothing legal in their way for making a speedy start of actual construction on the new Lawrence county court house, as a result of the action of the public works administration yesterday in passing favorably on the request for the funds. Selection of a site would be the next thing in order.

There must be a lot of New Castle citizens who can successfully evade paying their personal tax assessments, judging from the record of the exonerations allowed by the school board Wednesday night. The exonerations show $53,333.20 in uncollected personal school taxes in 1932. At $5 per head, this would indicate that over ten thousand persons assessed this tax did not pay. It appears to PA News that there should be some more drastic method of collecting this assessment.

Military Importance Of Mass Plane Flight Is Stressed By Japan

By JAMES R. YOUNG
International News Service Staff
Correspondent

TOKYO, Jan. 12.—Stressing the military importance of the American navy's record-breaking mass flight from San Francisco to Honolulu, Japanese officialdom today asserted it has created an entirely new situation in the Pacific.

The flight, closely linking the Hawaiian islands with the American mainland, makes Honolulu a stepping stone to the United States possessions of Guam and the Philippine islands, a spokesman for the Japanese navy declared.

Thus, he stated, the United States and her Asiatic ports are linked by a matter of hours, instead of days. The Japanese pointed out that the flight was strong evidence of great American progress in aviation, and that it automatically extended the American navy's field of activities by many thousands of miles.

Without referring to any specific military problem, the navy spokesman said the flight was convincing proof that the United States in the future would be greatly facilitated in sending troops great distances.

Japanese circles were not surprised at successful completion of the flight. Instead, they stressed it as a natural result of careful research and planning in the field of aviation advancement.

MYSTERIOUS MAN IS BEING HUNTED

(International News Service)
DOVER, O., Jan. 12.—Suspecting a torch murder, county officials aided by members of the state highway patrol today launched a search for a mysterious man, following the finding of a body in the fire scarred ruins of an automobile near here.

The mysterious man, believed to be a foreigner, was seen acting suspiciously near the scene where the car was found ditched and burned. The automobile, almost completely destroyed by the flames, contained a corpse. The victim, unidentified and undetermined whether man or woman, was found sprawled in the rumble compartment of the machine. It had been wrapped in an oil-soaked blanket.

Belief was also expressed by officers that the victim may have been slain elsewhere and taken to the point on the paved road between Dover and Mineral City where the car was found ditched and burned.

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—The fates answered Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop's unspoken prayer today with a spurt in the selection of the jury which will decide whether or not she killed her daughter-in-law, Rheta Gardner Wynekoop.

Half an hour after the elderly woman physician came into court a new panel of jurors, bringing the total to eight, was selected. (International News Service)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—President Roosevelt today signed the federal liquor tax bill which is estimated to provide the treasury with more than $600,000,000 additional revenue. The measure was rushed through congress so that little time would be lost in turning on the flow of liquor taxes into the treasury coffers.

The bill provides a tax of $2 per gallon on distilled spirits and wines containing more than 24 per cent alcohol. A graduated tax scale is provided for liquors of lesser alcoholic volume. Beer is taxed at $5 a barrel.

Taxes on wine follow:
Wines of not more than 14 per cent alcohol by volume, 10 cents per gallon.
Wines of more than 14 but not more than 21 per cent, 20 cents per gallon.

The committee members are eager to know if he hid the shares in a "voting trust" to avoid "exciting attention," as was suggested in a letter to him by C. M. Keyes, president of the company.

The committee also is interested in determining why the gift was disguised as a sale "for income tax purposes."

Ford Tells Of Huge Loans To Detroit Bank

(International News Service)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Twelve million dollars of Ford money was poured into the guardian Detroit banking group from 1930 to the close of 1932, to silence criticism of national bank examiners, Edsel Ford told the senate banking committee today.

These loans were made without security, Ford said, in order to keep the assets of the bank groups at a level satisfactory to bank examiners. Ford said he did not recall how much had been loaned to the banking group but their total was brought to $12,000,000 by testimony brought out by Ferdinand Pecora, special committee counsel.

In 1930 Ford loaned $1,000,000 in cash and $5,000,000 in securities; in 1931 he endorsed a note for $2,500,000 by which the guardian group borrowed from the Continental Illinois bank and Trust company, of Chicago; in 1932 Ford admitted the Ford company loaned $3,500,000 to the Guardian banks.

In spite of these conditions, he told Pecora the group paid cash dividends which it obtained by requiring the various members to declare dividends.

"Did you sanction these dividends?" Pecora asked.

Conway, Jr., John Othites, Robert Burchfield, Jean Haug, Marianna Bergland, Gertrude Shaffer, Dorothy Price, Beryl Nunn, George Terzian, Betty Norris, Vera Crisc, Robert Allen, Eleanor McDill, Martha Bryan, Fred Joseph, Anna Alexander and Ruth Mathews.

No valedictorian or salutatorian have been named by high school officials for the past several years, and the "honor 20" replaces it. The seniors' percentages rank in the order in which their names are given.

The mid-year class will have 191 members.

Hit-Skip Driver Kills Aged Man On Pulaski Road

State Police And Coroner
Potter Investigating Circumstances Today

Struck by a hit-and-run driver while walking along the Pulaski road, George Crocker, aged 78 years, bachelor, of R. F. D. No. 3, was killed early last evening. His battered and lifeless body was found about 7:30 by Tony Frank of R. F. D. No. 3 at a point about a half mile from the city limits, just beyond the junction with the Wilmington road.

State police and Coroner Orville Potter are conducting an examination to determine, if possible, the identity of the parties responsible for his death.

The aged man, who lived alone in his home near the water works, had been visiting a nephew and was en route home when struck. One side of his head had been crushed in by the impact of the collision. His body was hurled about 40 feet, it is thought as his hat and glasses were found at a spot that far from the body.

Crocker was familiarly known to residents of the district as "Uncle George" and the manner of his death has caused deep indignation among those who knew him.

The body has been removed to the mortuary of Book & Leyde pending funeral arrangements.

EARLE WYNEKOOP STAYS IN HIDING

Son Does Not Attend Trial

Prosecution Unable To Find Him To Serve Papers Is Report

WILL PROBABLY BE DEFENSE WITNESS

By DOROTHY DUCAS
International News Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1934, By International News Service)

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Earle Wynkoop, the boy for whom Dr. Alice Lindsey Wynkoop is accused of having taken a woman's life, will not put in an appearance at his mother's trial until the prosecution has wound up its case.

Until then he will continue to walk back and forth behind the drawn blinds of the house where Rheta Gardner Wynkoop, his wife, was murdered. Walk, wondering what is happening in the court room half a city away, but unable to go out.

Keeps In Hiding
For if he emerges the state might subpoena him as a witness against the 22-year-old woman, physician who is fighting for her life against an accusation of murder.

"We won't let the state have another whack at him. They had him once and held him, and they won't do it again."

So did Walker Wynkoop, Earle's older brother, explain the absence from the stage of the star player in the Wynkoop mystery drama.

"I suppose every one is wondering why Earle isn't there," said Walker, in an exclusive interview with International News Service. "We have our reasons, never fear."

"He wants to come. He wants to be with mother during this ordeal. We practically have to tie him down to keep him away. But it is the best thing. They might try to force him to appear as a state's witness. Perhaps, when it is late for that, he will attend."

W. W. Smith, defense counsel, verified the brother's statement by declaring he had "heard the state wants Earle to testify for them." Smith declared he did not know where Earle was, although for ten days now state's attorney's police have picked the stone house where Earle is believed to be in hiding.

Those police do not say they have a subpoena ready to serve. They say: "We want to ask Earle one question we forgot when he was in custody." The Wynkoop family is unanimous in its distrust of that reason for the 24-hours-a-day guard.

Dr. Wynkoop misses having Earle with her in court, of course. She smiled sadly when I asked her how she felt about it, but her daughter, Dr. Catherine Wynkoop, assured me she "understood" the situation.

"Mother knows why he isn't there, and agrees it is best," said Catherine.

Whether or not to summon Earle as a defense witness, if the state falls to get him, was the subject of a secret conference in the office of the chief defense counsel. That step, which could not come before the end of next week, at earliest, still is in doubt.

and that which is non-taxable reveals the immense amount of property that escapes the burden of taxation from one method or another. Almost $8,000,000 in assessed value of property in this city is reported as non-taxable. Here is another proposition where some change should be made, it occurs to us.

Attitude of the U. S. Senate in putting the lid down on nations which have defaulted in their debt payments to United States meets a responsive sentiment in New Castle. Pa. Newc would be led to believe by favorable comment heard. It seems an entirely illogical proposition to allow such defaulting as has been done by France to go without any move at retaliation.

Two little ruffians got into a fight over some "very important" issue yesterday evening at the East Washington street bridge and attracted a crowd of twenty or thirty people around them. They were "egged" on by two men who thought it amusing. Queensbury rules were forgotten and the fight ended in a wrestling match and nose pulling contest.

Ex-service men who have their discharge papers should insure their safety by registering them at the court house. After registering, duplicate discharge papers can be secured at any time, but if they are lost before they are registered, they can never be replaced.

A rather surprising sight on East street this morning was a roadster with its top down. It was being driven by a young lady very appropriately garbed in a heavy fur coat, but, for all that, it must have been a cold ride.

WYNEKOOP CASE JURY SELECTING MAKES PROGRESS

murmured, leaning her head against the back of her chair wearily. "And if the judge sits until 7 o'clock—"

Her daughter, Dr. Catherine, who arrived at court a little late today and had to forgoe kissing her mother in the presence of the jury, touched the old woman's hand.

The Wynkoop family has been hoping most of all for speed in the legal machinery which will send back into the world of free beings a grandmother, shattered in health and shown of reputation, or may condemn that woman to the little walk unto eternity.

Unless the state hurries, the iron-jawed grandmother may break under the strain.

To Complete Jury Today.

Judge Joseph B. David says he will sit today until a jury is completed. Dr. Wynkoop, who has been ill during most of her stay in Cook county jail, is "going on her feet" right now, according to her daughter. The tedious business of questioning members of the special venire, hearing over and over the gruesome question "Have you conscientious scruples against capital punishment?" has the effect of water drops falling quietly, relentlessly, on the same spot.

But the first hour in court is always the worst. Dr. Wynkoop explained. Somehow as she is helped through the door to the right of the judge's bench, the sight of a room full of strange faces "does things to her". After a while, she accustoms herself to the sight of those who have come to judge her.

The second panel of jurors was, like the first, made up of young men. Defense counsel seem to place their hope in men for who the spectacle of an old woman, charged with an "operating table" murder, would have unconscious sentimental value.

Several times the state has challenged prospective jurors who answered the question "Would the fact that the defendant is a woman almost 63 years old have any bearing on the question?" with "yes".

The new jurors are a machinist, a photo-engraver, an electrical engineer and a cartage contractor. They join a draftsman, a bookkeeper, a painter, a salesman and a sales manager. The oldest is 53, the youngest 23. Only three of the eight are over 40.

Man Attacks Richard Lewis

South Side Alderman Is Attacked By Pedestrian Thursday Night

ACCUSED PLACED IN COUNTY JAIL

It took three aldermen to quell the pugilistic mood of Frank Sinko, of Morris street, who is in the Lawrence county jail, pending a hearing tonight in the office of Alderman J. Lee Cooper, of East Long avenue. He is charged with attacking Alderman Richard H. Lewis, Thursday night about 6:00 o'clock, on East Long avenue. He was brought to the county jail by Alderman Benjamin Thomas, of Shenango township.

Alderman Lewis describing the incident which occurred last night, said that he was walking down East Long avenue about 6:00 o'clock, Thursday night, when he was stopped by Frank Sinko. The man then asked Mr. Lewis what he was doing on East Long avenue.

After asking Mr. Lewis if he was the alderman on South Mill street, to which Mr. Lewis replied in the affirmative, Mr. Sinko commenced an attack on the alderman. Jack Steinbrink, a passerby, happened on the scene a few minutes later. Mr. Lewis placed Sinko under arrest, but he refused to go along with Lewis. Steinbrink aided Mr. Lewis in placing the attacker under arrest.

In the office of Alderman J. Lee Cooper, Mr. Lewis swore out an information against Sinko. Hearing this, Sinko grabbed a chair and narrowly missed hitting Lewis. The third alderman in the case, Alderman Benjamin Thomas, of Shenango township, happened on the scene, and brought Sinko to the county jail where he will remain until the hearing tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

"I appeared before me several times, and this is the reason he attacked me," Mr. Lewis said this afternoon.

Flight Commander U. S. Navy's Mass Flight San Francisco To Hawaii.

(Copyright, 1934, By International News Service)

HONOLULU, T. H., Jan. 12.—Well we have finished another routine flight.

We started for Hawaii from San Francisco and at no time held any doubt of our ability to get here on schedule.

If necessary we could turn right around and hop back again.

There was no occasion for concern when some of our planes dropped out of formation. That became necessary when we ran into clouds and fog destroying visibility. Even an airship needs more room when the weather becomes "soupy" as aviators say.

We are glad to arrive for no aviator likes long hours of blind flying. I want to emphasize at no time did any of our planes through their radio apparatus fail to keep in touch with each other, thus proving the feasibility of mass formation to Hawaii even when weather conditions are not of the best.

Even when Lieut. Perry's plane was separated from the rest of the squadron there was no time that we were out of contact with him by radio and his rejoining the squadron was a matter of routine.

We are glad to be in Hawaii. It will be a nice place to rest after our long flight. What we want is just to take in "black" and have a nice long sleep.

PRAISE POURS IN ON NAVAL FLIERS AT JOURNEY'S END

his men slept, congratulations poured in upon them. Assistant Secretary of Navy H. L. Roosevelt, Admiral W. H. Standley, chief of naval operations; Admiral D. F. Sellers, commander-in-chief of the United States fleet, and scores of others wireless highest praise.

Routine Transfer.

Although naval officials denied the flight represented more than a "routine transfer" of the squadron to its new base at Pearl harbor, reports persisted that it was the first leg of a flight around the world, with Midway, tiny American island outpost in the Pacific, as the next stopping place.

Commander McGinnis declared that the flight definitely proved the feasibility of mass flight to Hawaii even under relatively unfavorable weather conditions.

The triumphant air squadron was a thrilling sight as it appeared in perfect formation over Honolulu, circled the city and then swung off to Pearl harbor to land on clock like schedule. The planes settled down in numerical order, the No. 1 plane of Flight Commander McGinnis being the first to touch the water, the others following at approximate minute intervals.

Sleep Is Needed.

Sleep and smokes were the first demands of the aviators after they reached shore.

"I want a smoke," McGinnis said as naval chiefs rushed to shake his hand. The squadron leader was the first ashore.

Receptions were politely "ducked" by the aviators who declared they desired sleep and plenty of it.

Highly pleased with the performance of the huge planes, McGinnis asserted that there was still plenty gasoline in the tanks for at least eight more hours of flight. Each plane carried 1400 gallons at the start.

Commander McGinnis described the flight as a "good one."

"Despite good weather reports, we ran into fog and clouds which persisted throughout the night, necessitating blind flying entirely," he said.

All Of Us

BY MARSHALL MASLIN

WHAT IS "DUTY"?

Sometimes I read in a book or I hear somebody quote the first line of the ode that Wordsworth wrote to Duty.

He called her "Stern daughter of the Voice of God" and when those words are rolled out in thunder by some orator who believes in them utterly, they send a thrill along my spine and up to the back of my neck, and I almost believe that I know what they mean.

But I don't.
How could I know, being only a man, that duty is the stern daughter of the voice of God? How could I be so confident of the demands of duty? But this I do know, and it is that though we talk loudly and sonorously and use many big words frequently we do not know what they mean. We speak of duty with a capital "D" but too often we do not know what our own duty is.

I have lived long enough, too, to be suspicious when I hear a man or a woman remark complacently, "I did it because it was my Duty." Because I have seen many a cruel malicious, interfering thing done in the name of duty. Because I have heard many a word spoken beneath the shield of duty that should never have been spoken at all. Because I have seen people sacrifice themselves for a "duty" that was a fair, false cheat. And the more I have seen and heard of Duty and the things that are said and done for Duty's sake, the less I have believed in that word, or in any words that come so smoothly to our lips.

I heard no soldiers use the word "Patriotism" during the war. I have heard no truly humble men or women speak of their humility. I have heard no brave man talk largely of his courage. And I have come to believe that we use grand words most often when we lack the qualities those words should represent.

I know what my Duty is, but I do not like the world itself. I know what I should do, but I believe I must do it because it is my habit, my need, the very grain of my being and not because any man says it is my Duty. But suppose if I do the right thing because someone tells me it is my duty soon I shall be doing wrong things because I have persuaded myself they are my duty.

DON'T OVERDO THE "HAPPY MARRIAGE" ACT

In an effort to create an impression of happy companionship, many married couples overdo the matter till there is a suspicion that the opposite condition exists.

And folks have a right to be skeptical.

It is not the law of human nature for a couple to have lived together for many years and yet display an unusual interest in each other when in company.

Through many years they have become settled to the extent that they don't bill and coo unless it be for the purpose of dissimulation.

But deception of this kind is better than manifest irritability or boredom in the presence of others.

There are plenty of married people who live in such constant atmosphere of being "tried with each other" that everyone knows their state.

The commanding, overbearing person of a marital combination is another disagreeable person with whom to associate.

It is a pleasure to be in the society of married folk who are genuinely at ease and pleasant to each other.

They have a desire to overplay the game. They are just understanding and mutually agreeable—this sort is acceptable in any group. (Copyright, 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Business Increase Surprises A Real Government Bank Rail Crews Rejoice

By LESLIE EICHEL
Central Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—Surprise is being expressed over the constant increase in business. Credit expansion may not have to go as far as had been anticipated. Inflation of currency may be staved off to a large degree. Budget expenditures may not be as great as President Roosevelt had indicated.

The gain literally is world-wide. It looks as if the reaction in commodity prices had reached its worst in November.

Wall Street sees the greatest danger now in the expansion of bank credit beyond necessity due to heavy government expenditures and borrowings. In other words, Wall Street wishes that government expenditures would be halved.

Wall Street has a good talking argument on the matter. It says if the government borrows heavily, spends heavily, expands bank credits unduly, there will be inflation—and higher prices. If inflation can be controlled, if expenditures can be somewhat retarded, prices may seek normal, and the country will be ahead in the long run.

Well, there you have Wall Street's opinion.

POSTAL SAVINGS Instead of being abandoned Postal Savings banks are likely to become the nucleus of a government banking system. A proposal to permit Postal Savings banks to accept checking accounts is being considered seriously.

It is estimated that five billion dollars in additional deposits would accrue. That could be invested in government bonds in these days when the government has to sell billions in bonds.

RAILS BENEFIT Rapidly increasing steel business will cause railroads in the steel districts to put on extra crews again. The sudden steel upturn made Wall Street actually cheer.

But that was as nothing to the cheer in the White House.

LAGUADIA Mayor Fiorella H. La Guardia of New York had the majority of newspapers against him in his plea to Governor Herbert H. Lehman for broad powers to slash expenditures. But the undertow of the masses was strongly with him. As George Bernard Shaw says, people demand dictators.

Fortunately, both President Roosevelt and Mayor La Guardia are men of high aims.

RUSSIAN The tie between the United States and Russia is growing rapidly. Not only is Russia the only nation arranging to make purchases in the United States, but Russia arts have swept New York.

Russian dancers constitute the most "select" entertainment, next to the opera.

CRIMINAL LAWS

Among a number of items, there appears to me to be serious danger in the plan, unquestionably in the making to over-federalize (as I see it) the criminal laws of the United States.

The federal government to be sure has demonstrated its ability to convict two or three malefactors, who previously, had defied state authorities.

However, it has not convicted them upon the charges that they were successful in setting at naught in the state courts. It has convicted them of relatively small income tax law violations and then its judges have soaked them the limit—not, in reality, as income tax dodgers, but as racketeers and murderers.

But when the searchlight is turned upon genuinely big income tax dodgers?—upon multi-millionaires and possibly billionaires—who have lived in castles, with retinues of servants, built sea-going yachts and paid huge levies abroad while turning not one cent into Uncle Sam's treasury. How many of these has the federal government convicted? Not one, since there has been an income tax.

FEDERAL CASES WEAK That is to say, federal prosecution of state, charges, federally, camouflaged, is fairly efficient, but in honest-to-goodness federal cases, it falls down flatter, if anything, than state prosecution in state cases.

Should it not, in short, be required to make a better showing in its own present field before having its jurisdiction expanded?

Besides, federal prosecution of local offenders lends itself to abuse, somehow. At this very session of congress Senator Millard E. Tydings, was there to the French academy, created little interest with his fairy tales, died in obscurity at 75, but made "Mother Goose" immortal.

Find "Exam" Papers At Martin Gantz School

Fond memories will be recalled by former pupils of the Martin Gantz school in days of yore, through the finding of some old examination papers by workmen, engaged in razing the structure as a CWA project.

In between the floors were found a bunch of papers written by pupils of the third and fourth grades in an arithmetic test.

Among the names found on the papers, which were dated May 18 and May 19, 1897, were the following: Robert Kerr, Lewis Gardner, Virgie Dewberry, Lena Hackett, Elizabeth Patterson, Roy Bratschie, Rachel Bennett, Sarah Hollis, Hazel Williams, Willie Thompson, Ira C. Enlish, Merle Lionel Cook, Lewis Levine, Louis Koch, John Dean, May Ellis, Pearl Pyle, and Harry Turner.

Some of these papers would not doubt be interesting to these former pupils. Some of them would be proud of the marks made most of them were hundreds, but some weren't.

Another paper was a history test paper written by Margaret Kirk of Grade 7. This was dated May 18, 1898.

Another relic found was an old picture of George Washington, with a small American flag. It had evidently been in a frame, but the frame was disintegrated. The piece of wood which backed the picture was black with age. A piece of what appeared to have been a page from a magazine, "The Household Gem," was behind the picture. These are now in possession of Timekeeper Harold McIlvenny.

Many who witness the razing work are interested in what appears to have been the old heating plant at the building.

It was a circular flue, or chimney, which extended from the basement to the top of the building, and which contained a number of what appear to be boiler tubes. This was evidently the beginning of the steam heating system. Workmen state that there were several tank-like containers at the second and third floors, from which pipes radiated.

It is a crude looking system, but in its day was probably considered something fine.

RETURN OF A TAMED ANARCHIST

EMMA GOLDMAN is to pay the United States a 90-day visit on the promise that she will not engage in radical activities while in this country.

Things have changed since Miss Goldman was deported to Russia in 1917 as a dangerous radical. She had complained bitterly of conditions in America even proclaiming her doctrines here in New Castle, but when she was forced to live in a country of radicals this land of opportunity must have looked to her like an earthly paradise.

She comes to us now under the prosaic married name of Mrs. James Colton. It all sounds very much like the return of a tamed anarchist.

THE GEORGIA PLAN

On the theory that in real punishment lies the only effective remedy for reckless driving, whether by drunk or sober drivers, Georgia is setting an example in dealing with this class of offenders that well might be followed by other states.

It has been demonstrated that fines alone will not prevent recklessness in the operation of automobiles. Even an occasional jail sentence has been tried, but with results hardly any better. Sitting in jail a few days is no punishment for many persons.

These methods of seeking to curb reckless driving having proved ineffective, more promising means were sought. These were found in rock-pile and chain-gang sentences. Such sentences are being meted out to the worst offenders. No leniency will be shown second offenders of the drunken driving law nor to reckless driving whether drunk or sober, the judges of the state's criminal courts have announced.

The punishment doesn't end with completion of a sentence to a chain gang. The offender, in addition, loses his driver's license for a year.

A chain gang sentence in Georgia really means something. It means back-breaking work in making little rocks out of big ones and in applying pick and shovel on highway work. The usual sentences for reckless driving run from four to six months. This means that an offender who serves such a sentence has undergone some real punishment.

The Georgia plan, may seem to be too severe. Those who take this view, however fall to give proper thought to the large number of persons—adults and children—who annually lose their lives because of the recklessness of automobile drivers. These speed maniacs must be eliminated. Less severe methods having failed, the time has arrived for more severe ones to be tried.

Georgia's experiment should be of interest to every state in the union.

MORE MONEY IN CIRCULATION

Whether or not the economic program of the president will eventually turn out to bring back some degree of prosperity the fact remains that the money being expended and the jobs created are all having a present good effect on business and that this will continue for some months to come.

The purchasing power of the people will be greatly increased. This should stimulate all kinds of business. Yet there is the disposition on the part of many to not push their own business or to go after new customers as they once did. This feeling has perhaps been created because the government has done so much and is doing so much.

The influence of such a system is all too soon having its effect on those who are engaged in private business.

This country will however never get back to better times if everyone depends on the government for stimulation. If we let private enterprise and initiative die, if we do not arouse ourselves to the importance of going after new business and securing new customers we will not be co-operating with the government in its stupendous program for creating public work and affording jobs to many of our people.

THREE LEGGED DEER SHOT BY HUNTERS

(International News Service)
ALFRED, Me.—A 200-pound, nine-point buck, which three times survived the bullets of hunters, one of which had shot off a foreleg at the knee, fell before the rifle of For-

Sterilization Charges True

Woman Head Michigan Institution Says That 61
Have Been Sterilized

HAD ORDERS FROM
PROBATE COURT

(International News Service)
DETROIT, Jan. 12.—While clergy and citizens demanded a careful investigation, Mrs. Mildred Ainsworth, chief social worker at the Wayne county training school today calmly denied charges that 25 to 30 boys and girls inmates have been forced to submit to sterilization.

"The truth is that 61 of the inmates have been sterilized—47 girls and 14 boys—since the opening of the institution in September 1926," she said. "The operations were performed only after careful inquiry in conformity with the statute, and upon orders from the probate court."

"The charges of 'wanton violation of human rights,' were made by County Auditor Edward H. Williams, who declared that officials of the school had shown 'less respect for law and human decency than is observed in Hitler's Germany.'"

Trickery Charged
He further alleged that on three occasions Mrs. Ainsworth had resorted to "trickery" to persuade parents of inmates to sign papers agreeing to sterilization.

"Mr. Williams neglected to give the names of the cases in which he says I used 'trickery,'" she said, "and therefore I can't answer them specifically."

"Sterilization is never even considered except in cases where the child shows positive mental and social inadequacy."

"Each child under consideration for sterilization was given complete psychiatric tests and studied over a long period then, before the child was deprived of its reproductive powers, it was given another thorough examination, by two physicians, each equipped with its case history."

"The law requires that the child's adult next of kin sign a petition requesting the court sterilization order. We went even further, obtaining signatures of other adult members of the family when such members were accessible."

New Monetary Moves Planned

President Driving Steadily
Toward Goal Of Commodity Price Increases

(International News Service)
By EDWARD B. LOCKETT
International News Service Staff
Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Driving steadily toward his goal of commodity price increases, President Roosevelt has completed plans for several new monetary moves.

His next step probably will be a request to congress for power to call into the treasury the gold held by Federal Reserve banks. This action will not, necessarily, portend immediate use of those powers. The president in the past has indicated that stabilization was an ultimate aim of the administration—but that he does not consider the time ripe for such a move.

Details of the new moves planned, remained a closely guarded administration secret, but the president has been laying the ground-work for future action during the past several days. He called to the White House for conferences nearly all of his close financial aides.

The question of calling in gold was only one of half a dozen moves discussed in the conference. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Attorney General Cummings, Governor Eugene Black of the federal reserve board, and Rene Leon, the monetary expert who has from time to time advised the house coinage committee, were among those who gathered around White House tables.

When the president acts to call in gold, the obvious inference will be that stabilization, or devaluation of the dollar, is approaching apace. In such an act, gold holders would profit heavily, and the plan of the administration is to have that profit come to the treasury—the nation when the step is taken.

Silver was one of the matters taken up in the money conferences, too. Mr. Roosevelt has indicated in the past that he considered bimetallism a tried and true coinage system, and there is a strong demand on Capitol Hill for remonetization of the white metal.

CHINESE GIRLS
DEFY EDICT ON FOOT-BINDING
(International News Service)
PEIPING.—Despite the years of campaign against foot binding in the model province of Shansi, a survey just made discloses that there are 323,000 girls under 15 years of age with bound feet. Women between 15 and 50 with deformed feet number 625,000. A total of just under a million women thus defy the anti-foot binding law of China.

The fact that such a great number of girls born since the Republic have bound feet is the alarming part for the Shansi officials. Very obviously the men still desire, and the women do not object, to foot binding.

Foundation Of France Rocked By Big Scandal

Stavisky Swindle Stirs France To High Pitch; Investigation Is Demanded

DICTATORSHIP IS THREATENED

By WILLIAM PARKER
International News Service Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Jan. 12.—Grave warning that the $40,000,000 Stavisky pawnshop swindle may threaten the foundations of the French republic was sounded by Ferdinand Bouisson, president of the Chamber of Deputies, in opening Thursday's session at which the government of Premier Camille Chautemps came under fire in connection with the financial scandal.

Anticipating a heated attack upon the government Bouisson called upon the deputies not to carry their assault to the point where the republic might be menaced.

Referring for the first time in the chamber to the possibility that a dictatorship might supplant the parliamentary system in France, Bouisson said:

Should Unveil Scandal
"At a time when Europe is falling under dictatorships the French parliament must not permit the least incursion into representative rule which might end by affecting the republic itself."

Edouard Herriot, former premier and leader of the radical Socialist party, then proposed the order of the day on which the Chautemps government is destined to stand or be ousted from office before nightfall.

"Resolved, that the government should unveil the Stavisky scandal regardless of the political victims," Herriot asked the chamber to give Premier Chautemps a vote of confidence to enable him to pursue an investigation into the scandal, climaxed by the suicide of Stavisky at Chamonix on Monday after he had brought ruin to thousands of investors throughout France.

(International News Service)
TUCSON, Ariz., Jan. 12.—When an Arizona sun floods his room with too bright a glare, William H. Woodin resigned secretary of the treasury, can shut his eyes and go a-dreaming back to the gay throngs that swirled along Broadway on the "first nights" of many of the last decade's "hits."

FARM RELIEF PROCESSING HOG TAX

We have heard so much about farm relief during the past year, without seeing any of it, that the eastern farmers have lost faith in the present administration giving them the kind of relief that they had hoped for.

I will not express my opinion of the N. R. A. except to state that the only relief that it has given the eastern farmers is to relieve them of some of their hard-earned money that should have gone to pay interest on borrowed money, insurance on buildings, taxes on their farms and many other essential things that have not been paid. The N. R. A. has increased the cost of many essential things that a farmer must buy, without increasing in proportion, in price, many of the products which he has to sell.

Many of the products which the eastern farmer has to sell, such as corn, hogs, poultry, eggs, milk, cream, butter and some other products, are no higher in price than they were one year ago. The activities of the Agricultural Department have been centered in the West, where the farmers have been making the most noise, and plans have been put into action that have worked to the detriment of the eastern farmer.

As a rule legislation that benefits the western farmer is to the disadvantage of the eastern farmer. The eastern farmers are heavy purchasers of western grain for feeding purposes. It would be interesting to know how many tons of western feed is sold in Lawrence county annually. Many of the farmers do not have enough tillable ground to produce any more corn than they need to fill their silos and must purchase all the grain needed for dairy herds, young stock, poultry and hogs.

The southern cotton growers were paid one hundred and eleven million dollars last spring for growing cotton which they plowed down to decrease production and I understand that the plowing was so poorly done that much of the cotton grew, was gathered and marketed and that the total cotton production was very little below the average.

Instead of destroying the crop after it was started, I think that a much better plan would have been to invest the money in cotton, made it into blankets, comforts and clothing and used it in relief work.

It is estimated that $125,000,000 will be paid the cotton growers next spring to keep a part of their acreage out of production.

Last fall a wheat acreage reduction campaign was put on and the farmers were offered considerably more per acre to let a portion of their land lie idle than they could possibly make, in profit, if they farmed it in wheat. It worked to the advantage of the western farmers, who grow wheat on large areas, but the eastern farmers, who only grow a few acres, could not take advantage of it without interfering with their crop rotation. They also need all the straw that they have been accustomed to getting in order to have sufficient bedding for their stock.

Two meetings were held in each township in Lawrence county to present the acreage reduction campaign and while we have 2,200 farms in Lawrence county, only seven farmers signed up to reduce, and I presume that the ratio would be about the same all over the East. A total of one hundred and two million dollars was promised in payments to farmers who agreed to reduce their wheat acreage.

A newspaper article coming from Washington, dated December 28, 33, states that "The Pennsylvania farmers have agreed to reduce their wheat crop by 13,840 acres, and for this will receive a total of approximately $2,777,000! If my arithmetic is correct it would amount to $200 per acre. I do not know if this is a printer's mistake or if it was intentional for the purpose of giving the impression that the Pennsylvania farmers are getting a huge amount of money handed to them by the government.

The same article states that "Under the corn reduction program, if all growers participate, Pennsylvania farmers will be eligible to receive $2,801,000."

How can the Pennsylvania farmers participate in the corn production program when their corn is a feed crop and not a money crop? On account of this reduction program they are going to pay considerably more for the corn that they must buy than they otherwise would. I presume that the conditions in many other counties in the state are similar to Lawrence county, and I venture the assertion that there are 100 tons of western feed sold in Lawrence county for every ton of corn that is produced in the county and sold. Under these conditions it is evident that the corn reduction program is going to work a hardship to Pennsylvania farmers.

If the administration could induce all the farmers to co-operate in this reduction program and then unfavorable weather conditions should cut the crop short next year, and there is enough grain used to produce enough liquor so that the revenue will meet the expectations of the administration, some of the people in Washington will not know that there is a shortage of grain until their supply of whisky runs short.

It is not definitely determined whether the grain surplus is caused by over-production or under-consumption. If conditions would improve so that everybody could enjoy three square meals a day it would reduce the shortage considerably.

I am coming now to the hog reduction proposition. If it was not for the unjust hog tax this article would not be written. I do not want to be pessimistic, but when Uncle Sam tells his nephews that they must pay him from 20 to 40% of all the money that they receive for the hogs which they kill, when he has not done anything to entitle him to it, "silence ceases to be a virtue." I am not a tax dodger, as I willingly pay my county, poor, road, school, gas, check, dog and flour taxes, but for some reason the hog tax does not appeal to me.

Last fall the administration conceived the plan of reducing the hog supply by paying a premium on all brood sows that would be offered for sale. The pigs were paid for, at a considerably higher price than their market value. They were slaughtered, some were converted into fertilizer, some destroyed and some were preserved and later sent to relief organizations, but when the meat reached its destination some of it was unfit for human food.

If I am correctly informed, it is to pay for these pigs that the farmers are being assessed a hog tax. I think that it is well named as it is a hog tax in more ways than one.

The plan was to have the consumer pay for the tax, but it did not work out as planned.

The butchers are reported to have advised their customers not to buy pork on account of the tax; as a result the hogs accumulated in the markets and the packers bought them at a much lower price than they had been for a considerable time, thus forcing the producer to pay the tax.

The original tax plan was based on the live weight of the hogs, one half cent for November, one cent for December, one and one half cents for January and two cents for February. Some one has evidently gotten one eye partly open and decided to continue the one cent tax thru the month of January, one and one half cents through February and after March 1, $2.25 per 100 pounds. This will have a tendency to induce the farmers to force their hogs all onto the market before March 1st, keeping the markets glutted all the time and create a shortage after March 1.

The administration placed a tax of five cents per bushel on corn and planned to increase it to 28 cents per bushel on December 1, but for some reason it was decided to leave it at five cents.

Forcing prices up has a tendency to discourage buying and decreased consumption may not decrease the purpose.

"Human beings act according to human nature and not according to the dreams of theorists."

If a farmer slaughters and sells either whole or in part his hogs he is required to know the exact weight of the hog before killing, estimates will not be accepted. Not many farmers have a platform scale sufficiently large to weigh a large hog but he can go to the railroad station or a feed store and borrow a scale. As a hog does not take kindly to stepping up on a scale and standing still to be weighed, just before execution, it will be necessary to have a hog crate. Few farmers have hog crates and on many farms it would not be possible to find enough boards suitable to make a crate and I am told that some farmers do not have a hammer and saw and have not paid their taxes for several years. Uncle Sam says to them: My dear nephews, I know that the depression has hit you hard, and at the prices of feed you cannot sell your hogs for enough to pay for the feed but I need the money and you will have to pay me 20 per cent of what you receive for them and if you hold them until after March 1 you will have to pay me the half, unless the price advances, without taking the tax into consideration. I do not think that the eastern farmer can sell his hogs for enough to pay for the feed consumed and people who have not had the experience do not realize how much work there is in caring for hogs. A sow must be kept six months in order to raise a litter of pigs. That means feeding her at least 360 times, then the pigs must be kept from six or ten months and must be fed an average of about 500 times. Then a hog is always looking for a hole in the fence and if it cannot find one it does not hesitate to make one at its first opportunity and then no difference how busy the farmer is he has to run after them, put them back into the field and fix the fence. This may be repeated several times during the summer.

Some farmers who retail pork to customers are interested in knowing how much tax they will have to pay on the parts which they sell. I have the schedules from the treasury department but I cannot explain them, in fact I have not got it figured out yet. It is based on percentages of the live weight of the hog.

I presume that there will be some high salaried office holder sent around to help the farmers to figure it out.

The Crop Reporting Board from Washington announces that the farmers of Pennsylvania are receiving several cents more per bushel for wheat, corn, oats and barley, one dollar a ton more for hay and double the price for potatoes than they received in 1932. They may not be aware that we had a drought in Pennsylvania last summer that cut the corn, hay and oats and potato crops in many sections more than 50 per cent below normal production. It was the most destructive drought that we have had in this section in the last fifty years or more. The increased price will not compensate for the crop shortage.

The eastern farmers think that they are entitled to another deal. They got a bum hand from the president's "New Deal." Not a trump card in it. I did think that he got the joker but they tell me the joker is a high card and I know that we did not get any high cards. I think that we got all ten spots.

President Roosevelt, in his pre-election talks promised the farmers some relief. If he gives us much more relief like the hog tax we will be heading toward the county relief. It is the duty of every farmer who sells any dressed pork to protest against the payment of the unjust hog tax.

I think that I am safe in making the statement that the purchasing power of the Pennsylvania farmer is not any higher than it was one year ago and in many cases it is lower.

With a larger accumulation of debts, with a larger the general conditions of the country are improving. I think that this improvement is due largely to the distribution of the billions of dollars that Uncle Sam is putting into circulation, through the several labor projects. I think that the C. W. A. will circulate a lot of money through the men who are worthy of it and willing to work for it.

President Roosevelt promised the farmers, who are in distress, relief by taking over their farm mortgages and giving them a lower rate of interest but he wants the mortgage holder to accept a second class bond, the payment of which the government will not guarantee, the banks will not buy and no one wants to take, at their face value. In most cases the distressed farmer will be compelled to go without the government loan or pay the difference between the face value and the cash value of the bonds.

The plans of the administration for farm relief are along the same lines as that of the National Farm Board which functioned a few years. They attempted to peg the price of wheat at $1.25 per bushel by purchasing large quantities of it at that price and storing it in elevators. As soon as the board stopped buying the price commenced to drop until it reached fifty cents per bushel and remained at a low figure until the stored wheat was practically all disposed of. After holding much of it for several years some of it was sold for export at a low price and some of it converted into flour and given to the relief organizations.

Uncle Sam will tell us that we must wait until next year to be benefited by the Hog Reduction Campaign in the increased price that we will receive for our pork. Who wants to raise hogs on high priced feed with the possibility of paying a heavy tax, not knowing if the consumers are going to be in a financial position to pay double the price for pork that they have been doing?

The automobile killed the hay market for the farmers and the business of growing breeding stock for sale has been shot, for several years as the farmers have not had the money to buy improved stock and now the administration plans to wreck the pork business by assessing a high tax on the hogs.

A few years ago we kept 8 or 10 brood sows. Last year I reduced to three and at present to one. Personally I am opposed to any kind of farm relief which is at the expense of the unfortunate consumer.

I am also opposed to boosting prices beyond the ability of the wage earner to pay. Some of the western farmers have demanded the resignation of secretary of agriculture Wallace and I think that it is about time for the eastern farmers to fall in line. The experiments being tried out by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, for farm relief, remind me of the story of the farmer who was milking his cow in the barn yard. It was in the summer time and the flies were very bad. He stood the switching until he lost his patience and then he grasped the cow's tail and tied it around his leg. He said later that he had not gone around the yard seven times until he realized that he had made a mistake.

CLOSE VOTE ON "GAG" RULE IN CONGRESS

House Passes On "Gag" Rule In Close Vote

Democratic Leaders Shocked At Narrow Escape From Defeat On Special Rule

SPEAKER RAINEY PRAISES ACTION

Vote Prohibits Amendments On Appropriation Measures During Session

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff
Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Democratic leaders of the house, shocked by their narrow escape from defeat on a "gag" rule requested by the president and designed to protect his economy program, today awaited the nation's reaction to the vote.

Speaker Henry T. Rainey predicted the recalcitrant Democrats would receive emphatic demands from their constituents to stand by the president throughout the session. The special rule, which prohibited amendments on any appropriation bill during the present congress affecting the federal pay-cut and some veterans economy provisions, was carried by a vote of 197 to 192.

Nation's Reaction.
Rebelling against the leadership were 84 Democrats, 103 Republicans and five Farmer-Laborites.
"I am glad it happened," said Speaker Rainey. "It will have a salutary effect. The members will begin hearing from home where the people are standing with the president."

The extent of the rebellion in the house against the pay-cut and veterans economy programs other predicted, may force modification of the $265,000,000 veterans saving bill. A prominent Democratic leader, who declined to permit his name to be used, asserted that the revolt of Democrats was against "gag" rule.

Administration Voters.
"Some day we are going to become Democrats again and not merely administration voters," he said.

Revision of the veterans act was forseen by Republicans, who led the fight on the "gag" rule, while Democratic leaders assured their followers that their vote would not bar future amendments liberalizing the economy act, except as to pensions of wars prior to the Spanish-American war, this view was not accepted on all sides.

Means Pay Cut.
"While there was a strong feeling in behalf of the federal employees, I think the desire to amend the veterans economy act was the controlling motive," said Mrs. Mary Nourse Rogers (R) of Massachusetts, a veterans leader.

The action of the house specifically assured a 10 per cent federal pay cut for the year beginning July 1 unless cost of living rises. It restores five per cent of the pay-cut voted in the special session. It also affects special pension bills and army, navy and marine corps promotion pay.

Report 54,000,000 Bank Deposits In U.S. Are Insured

(International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Individual bank accounts numbering 54,000,000 in 13,431 institutions in every section of the United States have been insured up to $2,500 by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, Chairman Walter J. Cummings announced today.

This was held as certain to have a reassuring effect both upon public sentiment and upon business generally, according to Cummings.

"I believe this protection afforded to these depositors marks one of the most forward steps ever taken in the history of banking in America," Cummings declared.

Greater Confidence.
"Information which has come to me since the inception of the fund on January 1 indicated that deposit insurance is gaining in favor, not only with the general public but with bankers. Bank deposits in many cities have shown an increase so far this year, due, I believe, to the greater public confidence in banking which the insurance feature has engendered."

One percent of the number of banks which applied for membership in the insurance fund, or 141, failed to qualify.

Pennsylvania led in the number of banks holding membership in the temporary fund with 983.

Unless state banking authorities decided to eliminate their examinations of financial institutions members of the insurance fund operating under state charter will be subjected to a dull examination.

PREFER SILVER TO

(International News Service)

DENVER—Representatives in the Colorado state legislature want residents of this state to use silver currency instead of paper bills. George Nickum, dismissed several days ago as city electrician will have a hearing on charges of misconduct when council convenes as a trial board in city hall, at 11 a. m. January 22. The date was designated today following Nickum's request for a trial. In the meantime the duties will be filled by Rex Hughes, according to action recommended by Director of Safety D. O.

At the time Nickum was dismissed, an assistant, William F. Riley was sent home but returned to the electrical bureau and demonstrated to a temporary appointee, how the city's electrical equipment was operated. He did this it is said so that there could not possibly be any damage incurred. In consideration of this he was continued as assistant electrician.

After the hearing is ended and should there be a verdict of guilty the council will set a date for the holding of a civil service examination as the appointment can only be filled permanently after such an examination, it is reported.

Rovers Set For Battle Tonight

Sharon St. Johns Will Play
Tin City Rovers At Senior High Floor

BABE DIDRIKSON TO APPEAR HERE

Tin City Rovers basketball team will have the strong St. Johns team of Sharon as their Penn-Ohio league opponents tonight at the Senior High floor. It was announced by Raymond "Mickey" McBride, business manager of the Rovers. There will be a preliminary game tonight with the Gersons meeting the Highland U. P. team at 7:30 o'clock.

Coach Arnold "Fiz" Fraser of the Rovers hopes to get his boys started on a winning streak tonight. The Rovers have lost several tough engagements lately and hope that "lady luck" will smile their way tonight.

Have Fast Team
The Sharon quintet is made up of former high school and college stars including Ted Blamer, former Westminster star guard. Coach Fraser will likely start Shaffer and Grommes at the forwards, Alexander at center, and Sillman and Patterson at the guards. Gennock will be held in reserve along with Lackey.

New Castle basketball fans have been treated to some fine semi-pro games by the Tin City Rovers this year. The Penn-Ohio league idea is going over big. New Castle will get started soon on a winning stride and will make things tough for the other teams.

Girl Stars Will Appear
Basketball fans of New Castle and surrounding territory will be treated to an unusual event here Monday night when the Tin City Rovers will play the famous All-American basketball team on which will appear Miss Babe Didrikson, greatest girl athlete in the world.

Fans will recall that Miss Didrikson, hailing from Texas, won two first places at the 1933 Olympics and tied for another first place, and a week later broke the girls world record for discus throws at Chicago. She is an all-around athlete and plays basketball, golf and baseball. Jackie Mitchell

Also appearing with Miss Didrikson and the All-American basketball team will be Miss Jackie Mitchell, the famous girl baseball pitcher who holds the distinction of fanning Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig in an exhibition game.

There are several college stars in the All-American lineup, which will contain the two women and four or five men.

The game will be played at the George Washington Junior High floor and the admission price for everybody is twenty-five cents. McBride said today "Tin City Rovers season tickets for the home league games are not good for this special attraction."

NEW BELGIUM DEFENSES
(International News Service)
BRUSSELS—Opposition confronts the Belgian government on its new fortifications program to cost 700,000,000 Belgian francs.

The Socialist party decided to vote against the measure. It was determined, however, that the party would propose an official boycott of German products to handicap the alleged German war preparations.

The Belgian parliament will also be handed a Socialist resolution urging that the government co-operate with the other nations to halt the rearmament of Germany.

MICE ARE TRAPPED BY WILEY OYSTERS
(International News Service)
LA ROCHELLE, France—A fight between oysters and mice resulted in a victory for the molluscs in a grocery store here.

Marius Gautron, the grocer, had some oysters over after a big sale recently and left them on the counter. When he opened shop the next day he discovered that two of the oysters had caught a mouse each.

The mice had tried to swallow the molluscs, but were trapped when the latter snapped their shells.

Senior High School News

Attendance Will Reach New Peak

See 2,100 Students Coming With Semester Change; School Ready

With a total of 1,850 students now attending Senior high school classes, Principal Frank L. Orth today predicted that the school's enrollment would increase during the coming semester—opening January 29—to at least 2,100.

The Senior high school building was opened in 1911 with an intended capacity of 1,200. Several years ago a 20-room annex was built to house the increasing students, but this, too, has not sufficiently met the attendance problem.

Through the past three years the building has been subjected to enrollments which far exceed the normal capacity, but school authorities, making classroom adjustments of various sorts, have successfully met the demands which the growing attendance brought.

In the new semester, however, additional changes may again be required. Principal Orth pointed out that the average classroom attendance during the past semester has been anywhere from 25 to 34. This average may be increased by the incoming students.

At the George Washington junior high school, where an overflow group of 180 Senior high school students does its school-going, the attendance will also increase. Of the 150 there now, 49—those entering the senior year—will come to the Lincoln avenue building for the new semester. The Washington enrollment of high school students, because of the semester change, will get a boost.

No changes in the teaching force will be made with the coming of the new semester, it was said. However, the present teaching force will be required to handle the larger attendance in ways yet to be worked out.

The new semester, Mr. Orth said, will see a large group of post-graduate students in attendance.

Depression Brings Boost To School's Commercial Classes

Commercial subjects Senior high school records plainly show, have become extremely popular with students during the four depression years.

Principal F. L. Orth stated yesterday that a large number of students, academic and otherwise, have deemed it wise to add as electives many subjects taught in the commercial department—now it's one of the school's largest departments.

Especially has typewriting—a subject of use in almost any field—been a popular choice with over 700 enrolled in that subject for the new semester. The school's 125 typewriters are never idle from morning until night, Mr. Orth said.

Dr. Alley Speaks On Timely Subject

"Team Play Among Nations" Is His Topic Before Student Body

The students of the New Castle high school were very fortunate in having Professor Alden G. Alley as speaker in an assembly program Monday, January 8. Professor Alley is an instructor of history in Dana college, Newark, New Jersey. He has been traveling in Europe for several years, studying the condition of the different nations. He has also been present at several sessions of the League of Nations. His subject, "Team Play Among Nations," was very timely and helped the students to gain a wider understanding of world affairs.

I CAN IMPROVE YOUR HEALTH 100% IN ONLY 2 WEEKS TIME

Come To See Me At The New Castle Drug Co., 31 East Washington Street. Learn How To Put An End To Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Dizziness, Constipation, Rheumatism. Enjoy hearty meals, get Restful Sleep And Go To Work Full Of Vigor.

My invitation should not be declined by any man or woman who is weak, run-down or ailing in any way. It is an invitation that will restore your health and put an end to pain and suffering, often times in only two short weeks.

Probably you doubt this, but I can prove it. I am at the New Castle Drug Co. and I'll tell you all about my grand new remedy Vendol—a prescription of exceptional merit, written and used by a prominent physician down South. It is different from ordinary patent medicines and will restore health and happiness to most everyone who tries it. Thousands of bottles have been sold and everywhere it is offered people publicly praise it.

My new remedy Vendol is made from twelve selected ingredients, each one known to the medical profession for its effectiveness; therefore, it gives relief in many cases where ordinary means have failed. A remedy that acts by reaching to the depths of the trouble and quickly puts the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels in perfect working order. It fills you with a feeling of new health and you soon forget how miserable you have been, how blue and discouraged you were.

It is really amazing how my new remedy, Vendol, will make stomach disorders disappear. Those who have suffered for years tell how quickly it relieved them of gas, cramps, acidity, heartburn and gave a good appetite. Those who have been forced to do without food soon eat vegetables, meats and sweet things without suffering the slightest inconvenience afterwards.

I have actually seen my Vendol relieve a bad case of rheumatism in a few short weeks. I've seen backache disappear and those walking with canes, throw them away. I knew a woman who suffered from headaches and neuralgia that one bottle of Vendol gave complete relief. Vendol arouses a sluggish liver and overcomes many symptoms it produces such as dizzy spells, spots before the eyes, coated tongue, bad breath.

MR. J. A. MCGUIRE,
The Vendol Man

For constipation I'm frank to state that Vendol is the best medicine I ever knew. It produces easy, regular, prompt, complete action and due to its wonderful formula the results are very lasting.

I could quote from hundreds of letters telling how Vendol brought health and comfort to many who had been disappointed many times and given up hope of being well. Many had distressing experiences, some had been ill for years and their suffering was intense, but Vendol brought immediate relief. I can tell you why Vendol is a superior medicine and is different from the others which you may have tried and why it is the best medicine of its kind on the market.

That is why I invite you to come see me at the New Castle Drug Co., 31 East Washington Street. I'll give you a sample of this amazing new remedy. Buy a week's treatment to try—it will soon prove to you that it is without doubt the most efficient medicine you have ever had the good fortune to try. So come get a sample free.

BROILER PRICES SHOW TREND WITH SEASONS

Broiler prices for the past several years have behaved in a very decided seasonal manner.

From January to early March the market value has been on the upgrade. This peak in late winter has been followed by a gradual lowering of price until June or July when the level or period of fairly uniform prices prevailed.

Sizes of broilers demanded by buyers vary with the season of the year. From January to April 2 to 2 1/2 pound broilers are preferred. These weight requirements gradually increase until late in May when three pounds or more each have the preference. In late August 2 to 2 1/2 pound broilers again are desired.

SUGGESTIONS FOR SEASONAL GARDEN TASKS

With the advent of the new year many perplexing problems regarding the home grounds arise. When it is impossible to do any work out of doors time can be spent profitably in reading some of the better books on gardening. Many catalogs carry a wealth of information pertaining to plant materials. These should be read thoroughly and if one desires to purchase materials such plants should be marked in the catalogs.

Plan the garden judiciously this year. Obtain estimates on the cost of construction of garden accessories, tools and general plant materials. Select plant materials which are hardy in that particular section of the state in which you live. Purchase plant materials from reliable sources. Think twice before attempting to buy some of the so-called "astounding bargains". A good plant purchased from a reliable firm at a reasonable cost is better by far than a dozen plants obtained from a questionable source.

Reply Filed By Controller To Mandamus Writ

Legality Of Contract Made
With Architects Called Into Question

CONTROLLER'S DUTIES EMBRACE DISCRETION

County Controller, R. C. McCaslin through his attorney, Orville Brown this morning filed an answer to the mandamus brought by the Thayer Company against McCaslin to compel the payment of $7,800 commission on preliminary plans for a new court house.

The points brought out in the answer do not vary materially from the arguments recently made on a motion to quash the writ. It holds that the county commissioners have authority under the law to contract for land for a new court house. They may employ an architect to draw plans for the erection and equipment of buildings, but it is alleged that such activities must have the approval of the county controller before they become effective as obligations of the county, subject to the approval of the court.

It is admitted that a contract was made for the preparation of plans, but it is denied that it was entered into pursuant to law. Respondent says that the cost of the improvements will greatly exceed the $650,000 alleged.

Referring to a meeting which the controller had with the architects, it is contended that the latter did not prove that the money asked was due and owing, and it is claimed that the controller never agreed to it.

If the plaintiffs have a legal right to the money asked it is alleged that it can be collected by law.

It is further set forth that it is the duty of the county controller to supervise all fiscal matters of the county, and it has not been claimed that he had abused his rights.

Under the act of April 5, 1849 it is pointed out that the county commissioners do not have authority to borrow in excess of $20,000 for the erection of a new court house. Further it is contended that the county commissioners have, by making the contract, increased the expenses of the county for the year 1933 to an amount beyond taxes assessed for that year, which the county commissioners are specifically prohibited from doing.

In the deed for the present court house grounds, from David and Rebecca Crawford to the county commissioners on June 18, 1850, it appears that $1 and the agreement to erect a court house and jail on the land, constituted the consideration on which conveyance was made. It is claimed that the land would revert to heirs of the grantors, should the land be abandoned for the purpose intended.

The next step in the proceedings will be for the court to hear arguments of counsel for the plaintiffs and defendants. No time has yet been set for the arguments.

York, Bucks, Allegheny and Lancaster are four of the fifty greatest sweet corn growing counties in the country with York ranking thirteenth.

Scout Leaders Hear Sharon Pastor Speak

Rev. Wishart Has Two Topics
For Appearance On Lecture Course

A good-sized number of troop committeemen swelled the usual attendance at the Leader Training course at Westminster college last night, to hear Rev. W. L. Wishart of the First Presbyterian church, Sharon, speak on "Relations of the Troop Committee to the Troop" and "The Troop Committee and the Institution." New Castle troops were represented by the following delegations: Rotary V-1, three men; First Baptist (Troop 2) four men; First United Presbyterian (Troop 3) five men; Highland United Presbyterian (Troop V-18) six men; St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran (Troop V-21) two men; Kiwanis club of New Castle (Troop V-37) four men. Churches and other institutions not represented were the Mahoningtown group, Polish National Catholic, Epworth M. E., Second U. P., Wesley M. E., First Christian, First Presbyterian, Croton M. E., and Trinity Episcopal. The roll call held showed the above figures outside of men who were regular course students.

Rev. Wishart's messages were well received and the big class got a lot out of it. The second address got some good discussion afterwards.

The next session was announced for January 17, with Dr. G. S. Bennett and Dr. Levi M. Beeler as speakers, with a swimming session at the Westminster pool following the sessions. Patrol leaders were checking up on reading assignments last night, as there are only two more sessions to the course. The Red Cross First Aid course in March and April was mentioned last night.

Discovers $100 Bill In Trousers

Money Restored To Owner By Dry Cleaning Company
Employee

Just about the time you decide there are no honest men left in the world, somebody turns in a demonstration of simon pure honesty that restores your faith in human nature.

A namesake old gentleman in the employ of the Fish Dry Cleaning Company in Youngstown, O., has provided the example and here it is.

W. A. Long of Nashville, Tenn., an investigator for the United States government is a guest in the Castleton Hotel. A few days ago he sent a suit to the cleaners and because the local plant of the Fish company is down for repairs they sent the suit to their Youngstown plant.

An old gentleman employed to search clothes for articles left in them picked out a one hundred dollar bill from the trousers. He was so startled at seeing so much money in one piece that he dropped the trousers in a pile of other clothing and rushed to the office.

The manager asked him what trousers the money came from but by this time the old man couldn't be sure. A checkup was made and by a process of elimination the trousers of Mr. Long were thought to be the ones.

Thomas Boyle manager of the Castleton was asked to get in touch with Mr. Long and investigation disclosed the fact that Mr. Long had lost a one hundred dollar bill.

You can imagine his feelings if you ever had a one hundred dollar bill.

Congressman Ernest W. Gibson, above, of Brattleboro, Vt., a former schoolmate of the late President Coolidge, is favored to win the special election, January 16, for United States senator from Vermont to fill the post left vacant by the death of Senator Porter H. Dale. Gibson and Coolidge were schoolmates at Black River academy, in Ludlow, Vt.

Reports Now Indicate Five Teachers Married

Since the appearance of an article in Thursday's News, chronicling the discomfiture of the New Castle School Board over a teacher's getting married the question has been raised as to which one of five was meant.

In the discussion of the board Wednesday night the name of the teacher was not brought out in formal discussion although it was mentioned informally a little later. Because the name was not a part of the formal discussion The News did not use it.

Now it develops that other teachers have been married since the beginning of school, according to statements by other teachers. The total being placed at five. Four of the marriages have been given no publicity although the teacher's contract cannot be broken this year by marriage.

Under the School Code when a school board hires a teacher the contract is a continuing one until such time as the teacher herself breaks it or the board gives a sixty day notice of intention of cancelling it. Otherwise a teacher goes on from year to year, without signing a contract.

The policy of the local board is squarely against married women teaching in the schools. Before the present continuing contract, teachers were dismissed during the term because they had been married after the term started. Under the continuing contract law marriage does not constitute grounds for the breaking of the contract. The local board feels however that it is a breach of faith if not a contractual violation.

Workhouse Plan Is Further Considered

A. E. Conner Elected President Of Organization At Meeting In Butler

Another meeting of county commissioners from Mercer, Venango, Lawrence and Butler counties to discuss a proposed workhouse for the four counties, was held at Butler yesterday. Lawrence county was represented by County Commissioner A. E. Conner.

The conference was a continuation of that held recently in The Castleton hotel, this city. B. L. Scott of Harrisburg, director of the State Bureau of Corrections, was the principal speaker.

Mr. Scott stated at the meeting that the department had not decided whether or not a workhouse for the four counties would be advisable, but meetings are being held for the purpose of considering it and hearing the views of county commissioners.

Discussions were along the same line as held here. Another meeting was arranged to be held at the Penn-Grove hotel, Grove City, on March 1. An organization was effected by electing A. E. Conner of Lawrence county, president, and J. C. McElhane of Venango county, secretary.

Believe Stavisky Slaying Victim

High French Officials Believe Murder Of Missing Financier Covered Up

(International News Service)
PARIS, Jan. 12.—The charge that Alexander Stavisky, head of the defunct Bayonne municipal pawnshop, was actually murdered and his death listed as a suicide was voiced in the Chamber of Deputies today.

Previously confined to certain sections of the French press, the allegation was given official status when M. Bernegary, deputy from the Bayonne district, told the chamber he "shares the view of a great many people that Stavisky was assassinated."

Bernegary's declaration threw the chamber into an uproar, and the body adjourned for two hours.

AROUND CITY HALL

Years ago it was not uncommon for a person to walk into the police courtroom and see some man seated behind what is known as the mayor's desk. And on innumerable occasions the person would ask: "Are you the mayor?" This practice has undergone a change during the past few months. It is against the rules of Police Chief Haven for any person except the mayor to occupy the chair behind the desk.

The telephone of Director of Safety D. O. Davies was busy a few evenings ago when it became known that a new electrician was to be added to the city service. And not only did the applicants for the position call but their friends also put the buzzer into action. The job will be filled today or Saturday, it is reported. According to reports the name of the man who will be appointed starts with an H.

Harry Hoskins, the consulting engineer for the CWA says there is not sufficient space in Dean park for a baseball field that can be used by the senior players. However, there will be a juniors field and also a baseball courts. Some real fields, he said, will be made at Cunningham park.

Not many years ago they were wed. The sun was bright when they promised, she to honor and obey and he to hold and support, until death do us part. They gazed upon the world with hope-filled eyes. And then the depression. Jobs became fewer. Finally his job was a thing of the past. And then came the gaunt destroyer, sickness. He summoned a doctor and as usual when no one else came, the doctor did and they hoped for a quick return to health. Money was needed and the young man who a few years ago had promised to hold and support conceived of a way out which proved a way to trouble. Yesterday the little home which has been hit by adversity yielded several gallons of illicit whiskey. The ill woman was alone. Police did not annoy her—just confiscated the liquor. This proved the man in the man. Upon his return home he learned of what had happened and remembering his vow to protect, he donned his coat and hat and sought the police who had visited his home. He told them he was responsible for the liquor being in his home; that his wife had no share in his plan of trying to find a way out. He was locked up. However, the mayor and chief of police did not immediately pounce on the young man. Instead a quiet investigation is under way. Perhaps he will be punished. It is likely he will be but its dollars to doughnuts the manliness he showed in taking the blunt without a whimper will earn him a "break."

Police chronology for the 24 hours ending 3:30 p. m. January 11, ten arrests as follows: Violating parking ordinance, one; drunkenness, four; drunkenness and disorderly conduct, two; suspicious characters, two, and begging, one.

Stabilization Hearings Will Start Monday

Without Administration Approval Hearings Will Be Held By The House Committee

(International News Service)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Hearings on stabilization of the dollar, decided upon without administration approval, will be opened on Monday by the House coinage committee, Chairman Andrew Somers (D) of New York announced today.

Noted authorities on money have been invited to appear before the committee.

The first witness will be Prof. O. M. W. Sprague, former adviser to the Treasury and the Bank of England, who resigned his post here with a protest against the gold buying policy of the administration.

He will be followed on Tuesday by Frank A. Vanderlip, noted New York banker, and Father Charles E. Coughlin of Detroit, who are vigorously supporting the Roosevelt monetary policy.

Cyril James, monetary expert; Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale University, and James P. Warburg, former Treasury aide, will testify during the week.

Chairman Somers plans to notify the White House and the Treasury of the committee's intention.

The hearing is limited to stabilization of the dollar on a metallic base. The committee in the past has urged the use of silver as a part of the monetary system.

These three famous comedians arrived in New York in the same ship from Europe and fellow-passengers agreed their combined antics made a boatload. They are Marcel Vallee, French funny man who is Hollywood-bound with Maurice Chevalier, film star, and Harpo Marx, the "silent" member of that quartet of brothers. (Central Press)

ROOSEVELT PLAN? YES, HERE'S MY CARD

LONDON—When approached by anyone on the American situation Sir A. M. Samuel, Conservative Member of Parliament for Farnham, Surrey, an expert on currency problems, immediately hands the inquirer a small House of Commons card on which is written:

I do not understand the Roosevelt Plan.

Nor does Mr. Roosevelt. So please don't ask me to explain it.

Ask the Brain Storm Trust.

As a rule, though, those who say, "You take the brains and give me the breaks" have had more breaks than brains.

British Scoff At War Blast

Fail To Take Statement By Japanese Official Regarding War As Serious

(International News Service)
LONDON, Jan. 12.—The British admiralty considers declarations such as that of Vice-Admiral Suet-sugu of the Japanese navy, and stated Japan is preparing for war with the United States, as intended mainly for home consumption, it was authoritatively stated today.

A resume of Suet-sugu's sensational interview was published by the London Daily Mail and read with interest in official circles.

Regarding reports from Tokyo that Britain is "reinforcing" her naval base at Singapore, admiralty officials stated that naval improvements there were merely progressing as scheduled.

The modernization includes a new naval dock, which will be completed in 1938. Organization of the Hong Kong Volunteer Defense Corps, also alluded to in the Tokyo dispatch, has been going on for some time, it was said, the plan being to improve defensive resources in the event of a sudden emergency.

Coyote Band Is Being Hunted

Farmer Finds Two Ewes Partly Devoured, Posse Scours Woods Near Pittsburgh

(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH, Jan. 12.—A posse led by Justice of the Peace Chester A. Wyke, of Bridgeville, combed the wooded sections along the Allegheny-Washington county border today in search of a pack of man-eating coyotes believed preying on farmers' sheep in the district. The animals were unheard of in this region until several months ago. Then Case Pepe, farmer and roadhouse proprietor on the Washington Pike, found two ewes from his flock partly devoured in his pasture and a lamb, apparently frightened by the coyotes, on a neighbor's farm.

With her mine manager, Jud Allen, Miss Abbott was a recent visitor here where she obtains supplies. She said that the very first prospect on her property had uncovered gold ore with values running about $37 per ton at the present price of the yellow metal.

FRENCH MAY PAY DEBT BY BUYING COTTON

(International News Service)
PARIS.—Bales of cotton instead of bars of gold may be used as a means of payment of France's debt to America.

Bertram-Neidecker, head of the Traveler's Bank in Paris, and representative of French cotton interests in the United States, has arranged for the purchase of 3,000,000 bales of American cotton.

"It involves a psychological situation inasmuch as France only uses 600,000 bales a year," explained Neidecker "but she will try to dispose of the surplus in Poland, Russia and Roumania."

13,000,000 GERMANS LOST BECAUSE OF WAR

(International News Service)
BERLIN.—Germany lost 13,000,000 people by the war and the Versailles treaty, according to Friedrich Burgoeder of the Reich bureau of statistics.
Germany had 2,000,000 actual war dead and lost another 750,000 by the hunger blockade of the allies, he claims. The decrease in births by the war is estimated at from 3,000,000 to 3,500,000, says Burgoeder.
A further reduction of the population of the Reich was effected by the territorial losses under the treaty of Versailles terms.

GAVE ART FORTUNE TO CHARITY IN ERROR

(International News Service)
BOSTON.—Someone let a fortune slip through his fingers, when, through lack of knowledge of art, he sent a priceless scene by R. Regis Gignoux, noted landscape artist, to the Morgan Memorial, a charitable institute for cast-off articles.
Robert C. Vose, noted collector of art, was rummaging through "pictures" at the memorial when he stumbled upon the scene. He found the picture just before it was to have received a coat of varnish from inexperienced workmen.

Andrew Mellon's Income Returns Being Studied

Department Of Justices Scrutinizes Personal Income Returns Of Mellon

LARGE REFUNDS BEING CHECKED

(International News Service)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—The personal income tax returns of Andrew W. Mellon and certain companies in which he has heavy holdings are under scrutiny by the department of justice, it was revealed today.

Attorney General Cummings said the investigation was being conducted because of charges made that under Mellon's administration of the treasury large refunds were illegally made to Mellon companies. The identity of the companies was not disclosed.

Senator Wheeler (D) of Montana, sponsored a resolution asking that the investigation be made.

The Mellon case is only one of a number that are being looked into in the treasury's new drive to collect some $800,000,000 in delinquent taxes.

Stone Will Be Used For Wall On Croton

Council Votes To Build Ornamental Wall Along Neshannock Creek

Council met today in city building and voted unanimously to use stone as the material in the ornamental wall which is to extend in North Croton avenue from the tool-house to Walnut street. The wall will be about three feet six inches high and about 15 inches wide at the top. It will be built along the recently constructed stone wall along the creek embankment.

Sometime ago the question was raised in council as to whether stone or brick was to be used and today

John H. Savolaine, architect and U. A. Levio, assistant construction engineer of the CWA visited council which was in session.

Levio pointed out that were the wall built of stone it may not be finished by February 15, when CWA work may end. Council was told that there are not enough skilled stone masons here to complete the work by that time.

Council took the attitude that 70-000 to 100,000 brick which would be required for the job would cost too much money and voted as to what kind of material should be used. The vote was unanimous. The work will get under way soon, it is believed.

To Probe Story Told To Police

Mayor Will Investigate Prisoner's Tale Before Ending Case

Stanley Harris who was arrested in North Beaver street yesterday not only told Mayor Mayne in police court today that he has been here only three months but that he was paroled for theft of a car at Binghamton, N. Y., and since being here has enjoyed the relief of Pennsylvania.

"You say you are drawing relief?"
the mayor asked.

The young man answered in the affirmative. He explained he had requested transportation back to New York and that he had been placed on relief.

"I don't see why Pennsylvania should furnish relief. You were not given a ticket to New Castle why give one for the return trip?" the mayor asked.

In the meantime he was held for the detectives bureau who will try to ascertain if his story is true.

Million Getting Relief In Berlin

Impoverished Inhabitants Are Being Fed And Sheltered
By Hitler's Orders

(International News Service)
BERLIN, Jan. 12.—More than a million impoverished inhabitants are now receiving food and shelter in Berlin alone, a survey today revealed. This is in keeping with Chancellor Hitler's promise that nobody should suffer from cold and hunger here during the cold months.
The assistance is being given the 1,250,000 needy wholly through the enlistment of public subscriptions, in addition to the state unemployment doles and old-age pensions.
It is pointed out that Jews are not excluded from receiving relief, and are being cared for in cooperation with Jewish charity organizations.
More than 145,000 volunteer workers affiliated with the Nazi party are supervising the distribution. Orders

tures to illustrate it.

THE AFFAIR AT DEEP VALLEY

By ELINOR MAXWELL and MOLLIE AMOS POLK

"MARIE, you're sure this is the Scrantons' place?" Dr. Brainerd swung his great car through the imposing gateway and we all peered forward as our headlights slashed a tunnel through the stormy darkness.

At the end of the avenue we could just discern the bulk of a huge house, dimly indicated by lights here and there, but no other sign of human habitation was to be seen, as far as the eye could reach.

Evidently no other guests were expected, for lights flooded the porte-cochere as we stopped in its shelter. Stiffly we climbed out of the car and trooped eagerly into the warmth of the luxuriously furnished hall, as a young butler flung open the door.

For one panicky moment I wondered if we were intruders, blundering into the wrong house in quest of cocktails and gaily adding ourselves to a party already under way. It was a fleeting impression, however, for in another moment Mrs. Scranton had come forward and was exchanging greetings with the Ludlows and acknowledging Marie's presentation of Dr. Brainerd, James Carter, and myself in the most cordial way imaginable.

As she crossed the hall I thought to myself that she was, perhaps, the most beautiful woman I had ever seen. She was, one guessed, about fifty, with an exquisite skin and perfectly white hair, widely undulated and drawn to a knot at the nape of her slender neck.

"It seems dreadful to add even two little miles to anyone's journey on such a night," she said, in whimsical apology, "but when Alicia Worthington told me that you were to be her week-end guests I couldn't let you go without at least a cocktail...but this unheralded fair weather and starlit skies...does one?"

"And then," James Carter said heavily, "Providence reminds us, with a storm like this."

I had heard that James Carter was a self-made man who had recently risen to great wealth, and, through his business associates, a certain doubtful social position. Suddenly, various stories about his prowess with women came crowding back into my memory and I wished heartily that our party were made up only of the Ludlows, nice Dr. Brainerd and myself, and that we were at our journey's end.

The thought of the ten more miles of bickering between Arthur and Marie, punctuated by Mr. Carter's heavy-handed sarcasms, was almost too much! Then as we settled down before the grateful warmth of the living-room fire and I watched our coats being borne away by the butler, I found myself wondering once more, how on earth Arthur Ludlow had ever managed to buy matched sables for Marie.

"While we're waiting for Horton to come back with the tea and cocktails," Mrs. Scranton excused herself, "I think I'll telephone to Grant and Alicia, just to let them know that you have not been drowned."

In a few minutes she came back, crying gaily, "You're my prisoners for the night. There's a mile or so of bad detour just below us and the little, temporary bridge has been washed away. The only other road to Rosebanks is very round-about. I know you'd never find your way, and so I have just telephoned to Grant and Alicia that you won't be there until tomorrow."

"Very high-handed of you, my dear!" came a voice from the doorway, and we saw framed there, a man of sixty, or thereabouts. He was a lean, well-built creature with a white moustache, and the ruddy skin of the habitual golfer. Now he advanced toward us with a genial smile. "This storm has got into my wife's blood, made a regular pirate of her!" He chuckled. "I hope you are prepared to render unquestioning obedience?"

For a moment we struggled with efforts at polite hesitation, but it was obvious that Mrs. Scranton's invitation had come as a life saver to all of us, and we joined in Mr. Scranton's laughter.

"Then it's all settled and I'll have your bags brought in at once," Mrs. Scranton continued gaily, "and you might as well dress for dinner, which, by the way, will be served in an hour, and we'll call it a party. I have plenty of room for you all. There are only two other guests with us this week, Robert Pell, and Leonora Cabell...the actress, you know."

"Leonora Cabell," Marie Ludlow repeated in a toneless voice, and I was sure I saw her exchange an enigmatical look with Mr. Carter. "Robert Pell!" exclaimed Arthur Ludlow, and to my bewilderment, he, too, cast the stolid Carter a meaningful glance.

"But, my dear Mrs. Scranton," Doctor Brainerd protested, as if he, too, had sensed the sudden strain, "this rain won't keep up indefinitely! Surely, things will clear up in another hour, and we can return to New York."

Mrs. Scranton waved her lovely hands deprecatingly. "Tomorrow it will be fair and you can continue your journey, but tonight the only sane thing is to stay at Deep Valley. Besides," she added, "I've always wanted to know the famous Doctor Brainerd."

"If you had only brought along your little satchel, Brainerd," said Marie Ludlow, "you could just have given me something to keep me quiet and my annoying chatter would be stilled and you could enjoy the evening."

"As a matter of fact," chuckled Doctor Brainerd, "I did bring it! I came directly from the hospital to pick you up at your apartment," yet!

Marie placed a pleading hand on his coat sleeve. "Please, Brainerd, you MUST give me something. I'll go stark, raving mad if I don't get a few hours of sleep tonight." Then turning to Mrs. Scranton, "I haven't slept a wink for three whole nights and I'm ready to drop in my tracks!"

Mrs. Scranton appealed to Doctor Brainerd, "Can't you do something? I know how utterly devastating it is not to be able to sleep. Sleeplessness, night after night,—it can be so much worse than pain. But, dear me, how solemn we're getting!" She smiled brightly at the doctor.—"You will do something, though, won't you?"

Doctor Brainerd softened. "Well, perhaps I could give Marie a small injection of Sodium Amytal."

"But that's dangerous stuff, isn't it, Brainerd?" protested Arthur.

Dr. Brainerd shook his head. "Not when just a little is administered," he said. "A large dose introduced too quickly might be fatal. And, of course, it must be injected immediately after the ampoule is broken. However, if I soften, and give Marie some it will be only one c.c. and may not even be felt for two or three hours."

"Then give it to me now, Brainerd!" Marie begged. "That will make things perfect! I'm sure that Mrs. Scranton, angel that she is to give us beds and food, will be quite fed up with me, in three hours!"

Doctor Brainerd hesitated, and I'm quite sure a refusal was on the tip of his tongue, but Mrs. Scranton intervened once more.

"Do give the child a bit of the stuff!" she urged. "And now, come with me, all of you, and I shall show you where I shall put you for the night."

She started toward the wide stairway, and like a bunch of sheepish and yet adventurous children we trailed after her. On our way up we were met by Robert Pell, a tall, dark, young man, descending. To my surprise, he already knew Arthur Ludlow and Mr. Carter, and, to my amazement, greeted them with a warmth that was only slightly above the freezing point.

The house, we found, was well planned for the accommodation of unexpected guests. There were several small bedrooms with bathrooms, and one or two large ones. Arthur Ludlow and Mr. Carter were allotted one of the large ones, containing twin beds. I was given a small one, next to Marie, but not adjoining. She and her bag were placed in a single room that opened into a bathroom, which, Mrs. Scranton explained, she was to share with Leonora Cabell, whose room was on the other side. Doctor Brainerd was led across the hall to a large room to be shared with Robert Pell.

Leonora Cabell, slender, silvery blond, and gowned in Patou's last word, emerged from her nook as we reached the upstairs hall, and was introduced to everyone by our good Samaritan.

Suddenly, I recalled vague rumors I had heard concerning an affair between her and the rich Mr. Carter. She acknowledged the introduction, however, with only a flutter of her deep blue eyes, and an impersonal, "How do you do?" Her heavy English accent was superb, considering the well-known fact that she had been born and reared in Waterloo, Iowa.

I had just started to unpack when Marie knocked at my door. "Come into Brainerd's room," she said, "and watch me get a shot. I'm so utterly fascinating, he's afraid to be alone with me, and Arthur, it seems, is in the tub."

I followed her across the hall to Doctor Brainerd's room. He had already opened his little medicine bag, and broke the little ampoule containing the sedative, as we entered.

"Roll up your sleeve, Marie," he commanded, in a businesslike voice, "and don't yell when this needle pricks you. Cowardly women bore me!"

The needle had hardly been removed when Leonora Cabell dashed into the room. "Doctor Brainerd!" she cried, still very English, in spite of her evident excitement. "Please come into my room at once! My maid has just broken a perfume bottle and set herself horribly!"

Doctor Brainerd placed the hypodermic syringe on the bed-side table, hurriedly washed his hands, and followed her from the room. With a wry little grimace, Marie pulled down her sleeve. "She makes me quite sick," she said with a nod toward the actress. "It rather surprises me to find her in this house!"

It was, perhaps, twenty minutes later that, while slipping my lace frock over my head, I was attracted by the sound of voices in Marie's room.

"Well! You got him, didn't you?" wafted through the partition in tones that were unmistakably those of the actress.

"Got him?" Marie repeated coldly.

"Yes—" returned Leonora Cabell. "Got him—away from me. Jim Carter was quite mad about me until he met you, and you began using your blandishments on him. You, with a husband who adores you! Well, I may not be perfect, but I have my code!"

"Please-get-out-of-my-room!" Marie's voice, cold with fury.

"Oh, I'm going, but remember, that sable coat that you are wearing is, by all rights, mine. Remember, too, this thing is not finished!"

Their conversation sank too low for hearing and then Leonora's laughter cut across the murmur of voices like a whiplash. "Social sables is somewhat higher than that, I fancy!"

That was all, but, thought I, as I lit a cigarette, "What a revelation! What a revelation!"

All things considered, however, dinner appeared to be a gay and friendly affair. Everybody seemed quite happy and talkative, except Doctor Brainerd, who wore a frown between his eyes that deepened as the evening wore on.

It was while we were drinking our coffee that the lights suddenly went out. "The storm must still have its way!" Came Mrs. Scranton's voice. "Horton, light some candles, please; you will find a company at large: This often happens at Deep Valley. We don't let our candle supply run low."

Then, as Horton fumbled his way across the black room, everybody began to talk at once. Someone brushed by me in the dark. A moment later, came a sudden gasp, then a groan of agony, followed by a sharp silence.

"What was that?" Leonora Cabell demanded sharply.

"I think-I-must-be-dying!" came a slow rasping whisper. "Someone has done something to..." and to our horror the voice trailed off into silence.

Pandemonium followed. Everybody was milling about in the dark, falling over everybody else, calling for candles, loudly asserting that the joke had gone far enough, if joke it was intended to be, and generally adding to the uproar.

After what seemed an age, Horton appeared in the doorway, bearing two candles which framed his serious young face in a halo of ruddy light. And he approached, and in the half light we beheld—James Carter slumped on the lounge.

"Good God!" Mr. Scranton exclaimed through frozen lips. "Is he—dead?" breathed Leonora Cabell.

Doctor Brainerd stepped forward, and, while we stared in sick amazement, made a swift examination. After what seemed an sickeningly long time, he looked up at his mouth, and uttered one word—"dead!"

Doctor Brainerd brushed his hand over his worn face. "A dose of Sodium Amytal which had been standing for some time was injected too rapidly into his arm, and with my hypodermic needle. Here it is—broken half off in his arm."

Horton had by now brought more candles and set them in a row on the long table back of the lounge. As Doctor Brainerd straightened from his task his eyes swept our faces searchingly. "I'm afraid I was too explicit in my description of the effects of Sodium Amytal in my various discussions this afternoon," he said quietly.

"Darned fine alibi," Arthur Ludlow murmured. Then, as I turned on him angrily, he shrugged his shoulders and made a small gesture—"Well, needle, needle, who's got the needle...you know those things don't go wandering around the house by themselves."

Dr. Brainerd turned to him quite calmly. "Someone stole my needle just after I used it for Marie this afternoon. I did not use the full charge. Enough remained in the needle to provide, upon standing, a fatal dose for one whose blood pressure was as high as Mr. Carter's. If you will remember, Marie and Kathleen," he said, turning to us, in turn, "Miss Cabell called me to come in haste to her maid who had been badly cut. Unwisely, my God, how unwisely,—I left the needle on the bed-side table in my own room."

"You also left Mrs. Ludlow and Miss Anstruther in your room, did you not?" Leonora Cabell inquired coldly.

"You don't think we did it!" I exclaimed, horrified.

Miss Cabell smiled the fixed artificial smile of the Cheshire cat. "Perhaps not YOU, Miss Anstruther," she replied softly.

Arthur Ludlow faced Miss Cabell with blazing eyes, "If you are accusing my wife—"

"And why not?" blazed the woman. "Your wife, indeed! She stole Jim Carter from me—do you mean to tell me that you don't know the history of those sables she wears?"

Marie Ludlow sprang from her chair, her face drained of all color, her eyes dilated. "And where were YOU while Doctor Brainerd was attending your maid? You knew about that hypodermic as well as I did. You had as much chance to get it as I did—and far more reason. All New York knows how Jim Carter threw you down!"

Wildly, Marie faced us. "This woman came to my room just before dinner and threatened me. She said then that 'this thing is not finished yet.' I thought it was a challenge to me, but Oh! she was planning to kill him then!"

"Oh, this is preposterous!" cried Mrs. Scranton. "This is terrible! I can't believe that such dreadful accusations are being made in our home!"

Mr. Scranton placed a quieting hand on her arm. "The fact remains, my dear," he said, gently, "a murder has been committed in this room. And, moreover, the murderer is in this ROOM. Doctor Brainerd was Miss Cabell with you all the time you were attending her maid?"

"Mr. Scranton!" wailed Leonora Cabell. "How CAN you?"

Doctor Brainerd hesitated for an instant, then—"No," he said. "Miss Cabell merely took me to the maid, and then left me."

"Ample time to get the needle," Marie triumphed.

"Did you notice, Doctor, that the needle was gone from your room when you returned, after caring for the maid?" Mr. Scranton demanded.

Doctor Brainerd nodded a stricken affirmative.

"Would anyone but a doctor know how to administer such a death dose?" Robert Pell asked the group at large.

Doctor Brainerd mutely held out his hand with the broken needle lying in the palm. "Scarcely a professional job," he said, after a moment, "if I must again deny my guilt. Furthermore, I scarcely have a motive."

"You have known him for years," replied the younger man, and then throwing all discretion to the winds he added, with a sudden fury burning in his eyes, "to know him was to hate him! He ruined ME in business. Deliberately ruined me! Got me into a corner and then sold me out, you know something about that, Ludlow!"

"And," Marie purred, "you were sitting next to Jim Carter when he was killed, and I suppose you don't know anything about it!"

"No more than your husband!" Robert Pell retorted. "And," with an ironical bow to Arthur Ludlow, he added, "I gather that your husband had a better motive than anyone of us for killing James Carter. A motive, of which YOU should be well aware."

"Stop!" screamed Mrs. Scranton, putting her lovely, slender hands over her ears.

"A man has been killed in our house, dear, you must try to understand," Mr. Scranton repeated in his quiet, colorless voice. "We must try to sift this thing to the bottom."

"Then question no further!" cried Mrs. Scranton, her beautiful eyes wide with an unnamed emotion, her lovely face drained of all color. "I killed James Carter."

A low cry of unbelief sprang from all of us and Mr. Scranton placed his arms about his wife's shaking shoulders. "Mary!" he said tenderly. "My poor, dear Mary. This terrible thing has unhinged your reason." Then, holding her protectively to his heart he cried: "My dear wife doesn't know what she is saying!"

Nor was his plea needed, for none of us had anything but pity for poor Mrs. Scranton, and shame for ourselves.

But Mrs. Scranton pulled herself free. "You must listen to me! I DO know what I'm saying. You must believe me! I killed James Carter—Oh, he was no stranger to me when he entered that door tonight. For years, I hated him with all the hatred one human being can hold toward another. For years I stalked him as a wild animal stalks its prey, but always, he eluded me—no," she laughed bitterly, "he never knew it."

"Ah, you still don't believe me," her eyes pleaded with us, "but I shall make you—believe me—and, perhaps, forgive me, too. For five years hatred of James Carter dominated my life, and then, for a time I forgot, our paths never crossed; I think, perhaps, I was too happy." She turned to her husband with a brief gesture and once more Mr. Scranton tried, in vain, to sooth and quiet her, but her voice went feverishly on:

"But, a few months ago, I began hearing about him again, first it was Robert Pell, the son of an old schoolmate, ruined by James Carter; then Leonora Cabell whose genius and ambition were being sapped by her feverish affair with that beast,—and, finally, Marie at luncheon, only the other day, talking of none but James Carter, then was silent and defiant when I commented on her sables. When she told me about Alicia's party at Rosebanks, I knew what I must do. I called Leonora at the theatre, Robert Pell at his office, and I was so urgent in my invitation that neither could refuse!"

"You see, I knew all and more than you accused each other of this evening," she said. "Perhaps you're beginning to believe me?"

"Then came the storm, to help me to delay you, to give me more time. I had planned that the cocktail I would hand James Carter would be a deadly mixture, but Dr. Brainerd's description of Sodium Amytal and its peculiar properties suggested a better way. By hook or crook I determined to possess myself of that syringe with its poisonous residue. Then Leonora's maid cut herself, the tiniest scratch, but I hinted at the possibility of blood-poisoning until Leonora, in terror, ran to fetch the doctor."

"Still later," she continued, "I decided that the moment had come. You thought that the lights went out because of the storm? They often do, but not tonight. I short-circuited the cord in the lamp here by my side. Then I slipped from my chair, stole across the room with the needle in my hand, and the thing was done!"

"Mary, my own darling!" came Mr. Scranton's distressed protest, as the gruesome recital ended. "You mustn't say such things. Don't listen to her!" he appealed to us, and again tried to take her into his arms, as though to shield her from our judgment.

Again she struggled free and with a swift gesture she stooped, and faced us again. "Now you will believe me," she panted, and our murmur of protest died away into frozen silence, as the conviction suddenly dawned that this was no hysterical tale of overwrought nerves, but sober truth. In her small, but muscular hand, she held the lamp-cord and a pair of tiny rose shears. One wire had been severed and turned back upon the other; a tiny spot on the silk cover, where the wrapping had been cut through, marked the point of contact. "Now, you see!" she triumphed, "I slipped in here before dinner and prepared the wire. Oh, I know about such things. There was a time when I had to be household mechanic, as well as homemaker and business woman, but I shall tell you about those days—"

"Ten years ago," Mrs. Scranton began her story. "My husband died quite suddenly, and I was left to take care of our idolized daughter, financially, as well as every other way. I had written a bit, and I managed to secure a position with one of the women's magazines which enabled me to rent a small apartment, and to send Mary through her last year at Miss Bronson's school."

"Several nights a month, I had to stay late at the office to read proof for the coming issue of the magazine, and on these occasions, I allowed Mary to spend the evening with one of her school friends."

"Then, one night, I heard her crying softly on the bed she occupied next to mine. She had thought I was asleep, but when I arose and took her slender young body in my arms, I suddenly knew her secret. I was stunned, heart-broken, but as she clung to me, convulsed with sobs, begging my forgiveness, I had no condemnation in my heart for her..."

"Despairingly she told me how it had happened. She had gone to a movie with a group of girls one night when I was held at the office. One of the girls had promised that her mother would be with them, but at the last moment illness kept her at home, and the girls went alone. At the theatre, they ran across the uncle of one of the girls, and with him was James Carter. He was then forty,—but he saw a possible prey in my poor baby."

"One engagement followed another—you know how fascinating James Carter could be; he was wealthy, powerful, showering favors—a dazzling creature to a romantic schoolgirl. Then, one day, she went to his apartment, and he gave her two or three cocktails. Dizzied by the stuff, blinded by her mad infatuation for a man twice her age, the unspeakable happened."

"Two months later, frightened and ill, she told him, but he merely laughed, told her nothing could be wrong."

"I was determined that she should not marry him. I need not have worried, he saw to that," Mrs. Scranton said bitterly. "I found that he had gone abroad."

"I managed to cancel the lease on the apartment, and we moved to a little suburb where we knew no one and where Mary could have her little, unwanted baby in peace. The weeks passed. One night she awoke me from my troubled sleep. I called the doctor at once. He came for us in his own car and took us to the hospital. Oh, he was kind—kind!"

"By the expression on the young doctor's face, I could tell that things were not as they should be. He looked, just as he looked to-night at the dinner table when he knew that his hypodermic had been stolen. You see—that young doctor was Doctor Brainerd."

Doctor Brainerd stepped forward and placed a trembling hand on Mrs. Scranton's arm. "I thought your face was familiar, but the difference in names—"

"Yes, I was Mrs. Morton then," said Mrs. Scranton, tears welling into her eyes as she covered his hand with her own. "My hair was black then; it turned white that terrible month. Doctor Brainerd, do you remember that night?"

Doctor Brainerd nodded. "I've often wondered what became of you." In the light of the sputtering candles Dr. Brainerd's face was ghastly. "I remember," he said quietly. "Toward the end, you went to the telephone, to beg the father of the child to come, and before you had returned to the room, both mother and child had passed away."

Suddenly the lights came flooding on. Horton had found and replaced the damaged fuse. We looked at each other like sleep-walkers coming out of a dream.

Arthur's arms were around Marie, and her face looked curiously young, and girlish; Leonora Cabell was weeping openly.

"Now you understand," said Mrs. Scranton piteously. "Can't we send for the police and have it over with?"

Agast we looked at each other; her question had brought us back to grim reality. No jury would convict her of murder, and yet—must she be dragged through the slime of the courts?

"Good God, no!" Robert Pell turned to Dr. Brainerd. "A man of Carter's excesses might easily have dropped dead, might he not?"

Dr. Brainerd nodded quietly. "He might. But in this case my patient died of an overdose of Sodium Amytal, inadvertently self-administered. This shall I record in the coroner's report!"

Observations In 7th Ward

If that really was a robin that a local engineer saw out East Cherry street extension yesterday, then it wasn't a very bright bird. No robin with sense would stay north of the Carolines during any month that has on "r" in it.

Vallee isn't the only one who gets all tangled up in Webbs. A rather aristocratic looking dog, brown with white spots, got himself caught in a bush on Cherry street yesterday afternoon, all because he neglected to remove the leash on his neck when making a getaway from his master or mistress. The leash held him tight to the bush. His mournful howls brought a passerby to the rescue.

Now that there is no bank in Mahoningtown, the local postoffice is kept busy making change these days. It receives many requests to cash checks but does not do so, unless they are government checks.

A local chap, while looking through some old newspapers yesterday, came upon an account of the flight of the Biddle boys, and their death in a gun battle with police, between Prospect and Butler. The anniversary of the gun battle will be February 5. It was 32 years ago. Can you remember all the facts?

Constable Joe Russo's friends are great admirers of his new tricky cigarette lighter, but they are beginning to look upon it with suspicion. It has finally occurred to them that they have lost a lot of cigarettes in the demonstrations the constable has so obligingly given. "How does it work?" they ask. "It's simple," the constable replies. "I'll show you. Got a cigarette?"

"Here." "Alright. You put it in the case like this. Then press this button. And presto, the cigarette comes out lighted." The constable nonchalantly places the borrowed bag in his mouth and walks off.

In spite of the complaints Seventh ward citizens have made to council in the last couple of years, the lakes at the corners of Madison and Liberty, Newell and Arch, still materialize and stay after every rainfall. A little sewer work and the nuisances would be remedied and everyone would be happy. How about it, Mr. Butler? Why don't you come over and see the lakes some time?

Musical Program Feature Of Party

Frank C. Summers Entertains Some 50 Men At Party On Thursday Evening

Frank C. Summers delightfully entertained about 50 men at a party Thursday night in the Tigers club on South Mill street.

During the earlier part of the evening cards proved the chief diversion. Mr. Summers arranged a musical program for the evening which proved most enjoyable. The selections rendered by Tunney Copple, Rocco Litrenta and Elmo Moncrief met with approval.

Frank DeLillo, one of the most talented singers in the city, added much color to the program with several vocal solos. Next on the program was George LeComte, formerly of this city and now of Weirton, W.

Va. His accordion numbers and singing pleased the gathering.

Angelo Feligenzi and his violin added much zest to the musical presentation. Tony Paglia accompanied on the piano. Joe Factor's ukelele selections amused the men.

Michael Cea's interpretation of an orchestra was one of the features of the evening. Mr. Cea played a guitar, harmonica, miniature horn and bass drum at the same time. His singing also proved enjoyable. This concluded the musical program.

The men were then ushered into the dining room of the club where a delicious luncheon was served. The remainder of the evening was spent in chatting and listening to music.

COURTSHIP CLASSES MERELY EDUCATIONAL

(International News Service)

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah—Courtship classes in high schools and colleges do not necessarily lead to "scientific mating."

Prof. E. E. Erickson of the University of Utah philosophy department, who gained nationwide fame through his courtship classes, scouted the idea of scientific choice of mates.

He declared, however, that girls considering matrimony should ask themselves the following questions: "Is the boy suited to the ideals of the girl? Are they of the same religion? Are they adapted to the same methods of living?"

TWO PET BEAR CUBS GO BACK TO NATURE

Every night they returned from their foraging to their pen, like chickens coming home to roost. One night they failed to return, and now timorous Jackson folks are sleeping with their windows and doors locked and bolted.

Downcast days frequently follow common constipation. It may cause headaches, loss of appetite and energy. Yet it can be overcome usually by eating a delicious cereal.

Laboratory tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies "bulk" and vitamin B to aid regularity. ALL-BRAN is also a rich source of blood-building iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. Special processes of cooking and flavoring make Kellogg's ALL-BRAN more palatable than ordinary bran.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

IMPORTANT

One important thing to remember in buying a bran product for the relief of constipation—is to look at the label. The Food and Drug Administration has advised that all bran products should state clearly on the package just what they contain.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN—because it is all bran with only flavor added, gives you the generous amount of "bulk" needed to promote proper elimination.

International Issues Taken Up By Senate

Administration Leaders To Seek Ratification Of St. Lawrence Waterway Treaty

JOHNSON BILL BEING BLOCKED

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 12.—Two major international issues were projected into the senate today as administration leaders sought ratification of the St. Lawrence waterway treaty after blocking enactment of the Johnson bill, outlawing obligations of the defaulting debtor nations.

The St. Lawrence treaty developed a bitter controversy, with party lines shattered and its opponents predicting victory. Private polls indicated President Roosevelt would be defeated in his plan for prompt ratification.

Political Hornets

The administration appeared headed toward a nest of political hornets in its handling of the Johnson bill. This measure, prohibiting any American citizen from lending money or buying the bonds of a defaulting debtor nation, or any of its political subdivisions, passed the senate without a record vote. Further immediate action was blocked when Senator Robinson (D) of Arkansas, administration leader, served notice he would move to reconsider its passage.

Senator Hiram W. Johnson (R) of California, author of the bill, promptly accepted the challenge. "If they want a record vote," said Johnson, "this bill will pass the senate by five to one. It endeavors to put the debt defaulting nations in a class by themselves, where they never again can default to the American people or the American government."

Will Study Bill

Robinson announced he wished to study the bill to learn whether it would prohibit a citizen selling a defaulted government's bond, already in his possession. Johnson explained the bill only applied to future issues but Robinson insisted on delaying action.

Johnson was supported by the fact that between $20,000,000 and $25,000,000 of foreign obligations, public and private, have been sold in this country since 1914, most of which now are in default. This total included the $11,000,000 of foreign debts, still due the United States from European governments. Public and private foreign securities, sold direct to American citizens, total between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000.

The Johnson inquiry, a year ago, revealed American citizens had purchased $5,548,200,000 of European government securities and $1,531,000,000 of South American government securities. Most of these issues have been defaulted.

The conventions are scheduled to begin Monday morning and the last of them will not be completed until Friday noon, the final day of the show.

Entry lists in the competitive livestock exhibitions show that every county will be represented in the lists again this year. Last year every county was represented and at least one prize was awarded to some farmer in every county.

The annual trek of farmers to the show this year is expected to exceed 300,000 mark it was estimated. Last year, the number of people entering the 10 acre building was over 275,000. The attendance has been over 250,000 since the exposition was first held in the new structure in 1931.

Director of the show, John H. Schuller.

Light is urging persons intending to visit the exposition to come on Monday, Tuesday or Friday to avoid the usual mid-week crowds. Every exhibit must be in place for the opening Monday and cannot be torn down before the closing on Friday, he explained, so that any day is as good as any other.

Livestock judging will start at 8 a. m. Monday, the first contest being for fat wether lambs. The last judging event is slated for Friday morning for the 4-H Club Shropshire, Hampshire and Cheviot lambs. The steer and lamb auction of 4-H entries comes Friday afternoon as the finale of the exhibition.

Crippled Youth Goes Free; Jury Ignores Charge

Grand Jury At Pittsburgh Gives Freedom To Youth Who Killed His Father

(International News Service)

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 12.—A 20-year-old crippled youth who shot and killed his father because "he treated me like a dog" was at liberty today.

Because a grand jury ignored murder charges against him, Theodore Kiesel, Duquesne, went free, although he freely admitted fatally shooting his father, Stanley Kiesel, 45.

Immediately after the shooting at the Kiesel home the youth walked into Duquesne police station and started officers with the declaration: "I have just killed my father."

SUCCESSFUL MARRIAGE NEEDS MORE THAN LOVE

(International News Service)

BOSTON.—Only idealists believe that "love conquers all," and they are due for a rude awakening, according to Professor W. Linwood Chase, professor of psychology at Boston University's school of education.

"Love alone cannot make a marriage successful," declared Professor Chase. "Young people should realize that they are adults, and have certain habits and characteristics that are the result of their experience, training and environment. Each must learn to adjust himself to the other's habits. Much of the difficulty of present day married life would be remedied if the couple were to have a frank discussion of these points before marriage."

EXAMINATIONS FOR COP VERY RIGID

(International News Service)

BOSTON.—It's almost as difficult to get into the Massachusetts state police rolls as into West Point. Twenty-four members recently were graduated of 7,000 men originally enrolled. A physical examination weeded out all but 1,056; two written examinations reduced the number to 400; oral tests left 50 to take a writers examination. Of the 30 who were left, after the training period, 24 men were chosen to fill the vacancies.

DRAWS PLANS FOR SEVENTEEN BRIDGES

MERCER, Pa., Jan. 12.—For early February bidding County Engineer P. P. Graham has drawn the plans and specifications for 17 county bridges that will be built just as soon as weather conditions will permit at an estimated cost of $95,000. The structures will replace bridges now in use that are obsolete and are no longer safe for travel.

On the Greenville-Clarks Mills road it is planned to replace several of the one-way bridges with wider structures. The largest bridge is that spanning the Shenando river at Wheatland 190 feet in length to be built at an estimated cost of $35,000.

BURGLARS AT WORK HEARD POLICE RADIO

(International News Service)

DENVER.—The Denver police department's radio system, highly effective in checking crime, can be worked both ways, two patrolmen learned recently. Summoned to a store on a report that a burglary was in progress, they found the outdoor door of the safe knocked off, but the contents untouched.

A short-wave radio set on a desk beside the safe was going full blast, giving police reports. The burglars had moved the radio from another part of the store, heard the call that summoned the patrolmen and fled in time to escape arrest.

The Baptism And Temptation Of Jesus

"Brass Tacks" On The Sunday School Lesson

The Golden Text

Heb. 2:17, "It behooved him in all things to be made like unto his brethren."

By ALVIN E. BELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for Jan. 14 is Matt. 3:1-4:11, the Golden Text being Heb. 2:17, "It behooved him in all things to be made like unto his brethren.")

This gospel of the King and his kingdom having dealt in its first two chapters with the King's ancestry (1:1-17) and his advent (1:18-2:23), proceeds in today's lesson to deal with the King's ambassador (3:1-12), his anointing (3:13-17) and his adversary (4:1-11).

Over 700 years before the King's birth it had been prophesied by Isaiah, the prophet, that the King's way would be prepared before him by his ambassador when he described as "the voice of one crying in the wilderness. Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight." John the Baptist claimed the fulfillment of this prophecy as his own mission and ministry, as he came crying, "Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." How true the ambassador was to his King is seen when the King himself proclaims the keynote of his kingdom in the very same words, "Repent for the kingdom of heaven is at hand" (Matt. 4:17). John denounced the empty formalism and hypocrisy of those who felt that their position as children of Abraham and leaders of religion exempted them from the necessity of repentance. He demanded that they be baptized as a sign of repentance and bring forth in their lives the fruits of repentance. The dominant note of his preaching was judgment rather than mercy, severity rather than compassion.

The King's Anointing

When Jesus came to John for baptism John demurred. He saw a certain incongruity in one so sinless as "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world" coming to his baptism: "I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?" But the King was coming "to be made sin who knew no sin that he might be made the righteousness of God in him". Christ must identify himself with sinful humanity. So he came to baptism with publicans and harlots, saying to John, "Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." God made the baptism of Jesus not only his identification with the sinful race but his anointing for his messianic mission as prophet, priest, and king. For, "lo, the heavens were opened upon him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him; and lo, a voice from heaven saying, This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." It was God's testimony to the sinlessness and the Sonship of the one thus inaugurated to be the Lord's anointed Messiah.

The King's Adversary

Immediately following the King's anointing he must be turned over to his adversary the devil to be "tempted in all points like as we are". He was God's "new model" in humanity, "the second man", the last Adam. As such he must be tested before being commended to the public acceptance. "Then was Jesus led up of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil." The adversary's first attack was made in the realm of physical appetite, "Command that these stones be made bread"; his second attack was made in the realm of ambition, "All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me." Every assault was repulsed with "The sword of the spirit, the Word of God", as the King cried, again and again "It is written." Thus the paradise lost by the first Adam in a garden was regained for us by the last Adam in a wilderness.

Archives, Old Historians, Hold Lure For Patrons Of City Free Public Library

In a little room of the city public library, third floor east, there are enough facts about early New Castle and Lawrence county, and the people who made up the city and county population way back in the Revolutionary days, to keep an interested reader busy and thrilled for years.

On the shelves of the little room are old histories, old newspapers, old manuscripts, volumes and volumes of archives.

It requires a little experience to be able to find just what is wanted, but fact hunters soon learn that there is a system of finding them that is simple, once they "get on."

This correspondent looked in the room one day this week and found Mrs. F. G. Simonton, of Edinburg, and Miss Sarah Wallace, of this city, examining a manuscript that almost had a visible aura of age encircling it. The manuscript was one of their own, and was the original muster roll of the 134th regiment, 1st brigade, 16th division, Mercer county militia, during the War of 1812. It was dated May 12, 1812.

A letter from a mother to her son, William Richards, an early New Castle settler, written in 1786, was another interesting document. The names mentioned in the letter, and some of those in the muster roll, ancestors of Mrs. Simonton and Miss Wallace, could be traced in the library's archives.

It is a fascinating hobby, this delving into the past, and one for which the New Castle public library is well equipped. The records are kept as complete as possible. At times requests for information are sent to the Pittsburgh and Harrisburg libraries.

day for the regular monthly meeting. A tureen dinner will be served at noon.

Sara Tanner gave a monologue by a Japanese working girl, and Jean Body read a paper on "The Christ of the Andes". After the program the young ladies enjoyed a social hour and a delicious luncheon was served by the committee in charge. The next meeting will be held at the home of Miss Frances Reno.

Jones, and was full of encouragement. The report stated that the church is starting the year 1934 with a clean sheet. It was able, through the Willing Workers class of the Sunday school, to pay off the mortgage for the last of the year 1933. Two trustees, David Phillips and James B. Evans, were elected to the board.

Plan To Rebuild McGuffey's Home

That Henry Ford is planning to rebuild as a memorial to William Holmes McGuffey, the old log cabin in West Finley township, near Washington, Pa., where the author of the famous readers of public school memory was born, is a fact interesting to many New Castle people.

Mr. McGuffey had a number of direct ancestors in New Castle and Lawrence county.

Mr. Ford obtained an option on the place last Friday after a visit to the old homestead.

"Help" should not be followed by "but" when used in the sense of avoid; should be followed by a gerund. Say "I can't help regretting" not "I can't help but regret."

Welsh Lodge Meets Saturday Night; Other Notes Of Interest To Welsh

By WILLIAM A. JOHNS
Brython

Members of the Star of Wales lodge will remember the installation meeting Saturday evening when Joseph Leyde will be the master of ceremonies.

A card came from Mrs. John Lewis of the Welsh home, Rocky River, Cleveland, Ohio, this week, telling that the aged Welsh people of the Welsh home are enjoying life at its best. Mrs. Lewis operated a butcher store on Long avenue many years ago. She has many friends here.

Word from Thomas Edwards, Pico, California, notifies his many friends that the great flood at California did not affect them at Pico. Mr. and Mrs. William C. Price and Charley Johns at Los Angeles are safe and their property not damaged.

Celebration of St. David's day will be made by the Welsh all over the world on the first day of next March and the Welsh people of New Castle will not be backward in the celebration this year again.

W & J Grapplers To Wrestle Here

Amateur exponents of catch-as-catch-can, minus the hippodroming of the pros, will be witnessed Saturday night when the W. & J. and local Y. M. C. A. mat teams meet at the Y. Seven and possibly eight matches will be staged, according to Henry MacNicholas who will referee the bouts which are sanctioned by the Allegheny Mountain association of the Amateur Athletic union.

The wrestling matches will be the first to have been staged here within a year. W. F. Henry, director of athletics at W. & J. will bring a caravan of good college wrestlers here. Included among them will be Eddie Myers, crack 165-pound W. & J. fullback. As a sophomore last year Myers lost but one decision, later representing the Presidents at the Intercollegiate meet at Bethlehem. He comes from Lock Haven, Pa. He will meet Paul Fabian.

Salter of W. & J. will tackle Gene Cartwright, who looked very promising last season and has been showing excellent form in workouts this year. Russ or Knestruck will catch holds with Tom Giltile of this city and in the 135 pound class either John George or Gennock of New Castle will be forced to meet one of the trio—Eassey, Jones or Maswell, all of whom are about equal in ability, according to Coach Henry.

There ought to be plenty of action when Nick George, a star for several years, goes to the mat with McQuown. George had his shoulders pinned in one bout last season but hopes to come back into his prominence Saturday night and down McQuown. Whether he can, remains to be seen. It's likely that if any thing should happen he cannot wrestle, Joe Gentile will take his place.

Walter Adams of New Castle will meet either Hudson or Koselko and Bubenheim will be ready to step into Meyers' shoes with Fabian if untoward looked for incidents should keep Eddie out of the going. In the heavyweight division, Phil Benninghoff of New Castle will oppose either Tucker or Stringer of W. & J.

The first match will start at 8:30 p. m.

Place Trout In Stream Saturday

Members of the Lawrence County Sportsmen's association will distribute trout, received from a state hatchery in Elliott's run, Saturday. They were sent here in cans and the stream will be stocked so that there should be good trout fishing here when the season comes in.

Westminster Prepares For Slippery Rock

(Special To The News) NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., Jan. 12.—A revised lineup will be used by Coach John Lawther when the Westminster College basketball team faces Coach Thompson's Slippery Rock passers Saturday night. Failure of a number of players to score in the first half of the Duquesne game at Pittsburgh Tuesday night resulted in the shifts.

Schmeling And King Levinsky Battle Signed

Chicago Fishboy And Former Champion Will Fight In Chicago February 16

By JOHN C. HOFKMAN International News Service Sports Writer

CHICAGO, Jan. 12.—Quite as expected and purely in the interests of self preservation, the respective battalions of managers identified with Max Schmeling, the ex-champion, and Kingfish Levinsky have agreed to let their boys engage in spirited combat on February 16.

This much was established today when the "off again, on again" battle was on again, this time definitely, with the announcement by Mrs. Lean Levy, the fishboy's manager, that 25 per cent of the receipts will be all right with her. Thus the fishboy will get 25 per cent and Schmeling 35 per cent of what is expected to be a $80,000 gate.

As late as yesterday afternoon the bout was "very definitely" off, Chicago stadium officials announced, because the fishboy insisted on 30 per cent of the take. At this time, Joe Foley, the matchmaker, said:

"I think we will settle the thing by promoting a wrestling match. Joe Savoldi would be a good drawing card. From 'Leapin' Lena' to 'Jumping Joe', so to speak."

No sooner had Foley uttered these historic words than there was a loud bawling on the door of his office. From without a voice shrieked: "Let me in. This is Lena. We'll take 25 per cent!"

"How come?" quoth Foley, when the lady had been calmed. "Well, Mr. Foley," she said, "we have just discovered that 25 per cent is better than nothing."

And so the Levinsky-Schmeling thing is on again.

On Court House Hill

Postmaster Clinton White of New Wilmington, was a visitor at the county commissioners office yesterday. Mr. White was not wanting much, only a modest request that the new court house be erected in New Wilmington. His contention was that a building of such importance required an appropriate setting. "It would look fine nestled among the majestic buildings of Westminster college," he said. Mr. White is optimistic over the future of the New Castle-New Wilmington road. He says that he expects some day to see it all built up like a city street.

Motion for a new trial has been made at court in the case of W. J. Walker against Charles F. Morrow, of Wampum. This case grew out of an automobile accident in the seventh ward when Walker was struck and injured by a car belonging to Morrow and driven by Clyde McKim. The latter claimed that he had borrowed the car and was not on business for Morrow at the time of the accident. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the defendant.

Frank Palmer, of Shenango township, was discussing his taxes with a group of men at the court house yesterday. He said that a property on which he paid taxes of a little over $24 in 1916 had been jumped in valuation until he paid $108 in 1932. There was no special reason so far as he could see, for raising the valuation, further than a desire to get more taxes.

Air conditioning does not appear to be much of a problem at the court house. When the air in the court rooms gets too thick to breathe, court takes a recess, and the windows are thrown wide open. This is a little tough on the witnesses and spectators, who happen to be in the seats, but it gives them a chance to fill their lungs with fresh ozone from the great outside. Probably when the new court house is built there will be ventilators and air conditioners installed which will make the court rooms more comfortable. At any rate it won't be so hard on the bald-headed men.

The county commissioners have received from a subsidiary of the Carnegie Steel Company that furnished material for the West Washington street bridge, a booklet containing a picture of the bridge. It shows the two lanes for traffic and the center part inclosed by the little fences and re-inforced with concrete abutments at the ends. Below the picture is a description in the manner in which it was repaired under the plans made by Civil Engineer T. A. Gilkey. The idea of the picture is to show that counties can save money by repairing bridges with the particular line of steel manufactured by the company.

Jesse Kennedy special night deputy at the county jail, says it's a little lonesome but he likes his job.

Instead of having a regular assistant, it is understood that County Detective A. Sharp Leslie, will make use of constables of the city and county when he is in need of any special help. This will be a saving to the county and will at the same time help out the constables. Business is not very brisk in the constable line, and there are some good men wearing badges.

According to figures of county assessors, presented at the board of appeals, it appears that a fairly uniform assessment of real estate has been made at the tri-ennial assessment just completed. So far there has only been one assessor who had his valuations so low that they were out of line with the others, and he is revising them. When the former tri-ennial assessment was made properties are supposed to have been assessed at about sixty per cent of their value. The present assessment has been made at a presumably fair sale value under present conditions, which leaves the assessments at about the same as they were previously. There does not appear to be much dissatisfaction with the assessments. The commissioners have been fairly busy, but there has been no great rush to ask changes.

Attorney Charles R. Davis has been appointed auditor by the court to audit the accounts of Attorney Wylie McCaslin, executor in the estate of the late L. A. Phillips.

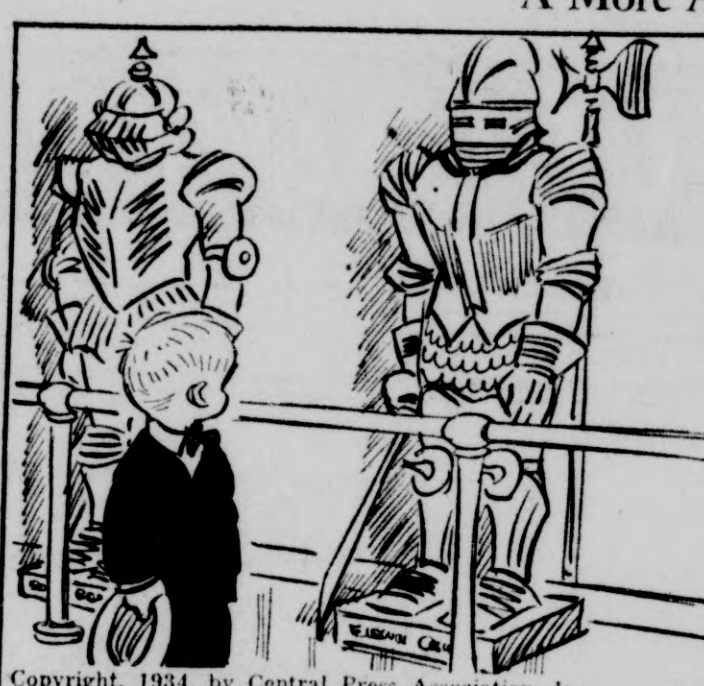

MILKED 262,000 COWS IN 20-YEAR PERIOD

(International News Service) PORTLAND, Ore. — Robert W. Montgomery of Bachelor Flat near St. Helens, feels that he has done his bit for the babies of Oregon and has forsaken the dairy industry after 20 years experience and turned to poultry.

Montgomery figures it out this way: During his fifth of a century in the dairy business he has milked 262,000 cows or about 400,000 gallons of milk, which would be more than 800,000 babies could gurggle in one day.

UNJUST
"No, I'm not a fugitive from justice." "Oh, yes you are! The judge ordered you to pay $50 a month alimony." "I know, but that wasn't justice."

UTILITY SHARES
HAVE FIRM TONE

By LESLIE GOULD

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—The stock market gave a dull performance today, profit-taking preventing the main body of issues from carrying through yesterday's rally.

Utility shares, a feature in Thursday's market, displayed a firm tone, profit-taking preventing the main body of issues from carrying through yesterday's rally.

Wheat gained more than a cent a bushel, but other commodities were mixed. Cotton lost about 25 cents under profit-taking, but silver gained 23 to 45 points.

Chrysler, which in early dealings proved a target for liquidation in the motor shares, steadied somewhat in later trading. General Motors and the lower priced motor shares were in moderate demand and held around the previous close.

Due to the good showing in car loadings reported today, a steady tone prevailed in the railroad shares.

New York Central, Lackawanna, Southern Railway and Atchafalaya were fairly active, at or slightly above yesterday's final prices.

Leaves was featured in the motion picture group, which turned active and strong after recent inactivity, gaining about a point. Large blocks of Paramount Public certificates were turned over at the best levels since the issue was listed.

Propose New Plan
For Election Of Local Teachers

Supt. DeLong Would Widen Range For Selection Of Teachers For Local Schools

COMPETITIVE EXAM
TO DECIDE SELECTION

ELLWOOD CITY, Jan. 12.—A fair and impartial plan for the selection of teachers to the Ellwood City public schools in the future, a plan which would still insure the best of the local applicants for teaching positions, was advocated and recommended to the local board of education at its monthly meeting in the Lincoln school last night by Supt. of Schools Vaughn R. DeLong.

Heretofore in this period of district Ellwood City applicants have been given the preference. Supt. DeLong stated that he has found a number of local applicants for teaching positions weak on certain points and subjects. He stated that the purpose of schools was to educate the children and not provide jobs for teachers. Good education must not be sacrificed by employing a local teacher when another more qualified is available. Although Supt. DeLong's plan is not without any consideration to Ellwood applicants, the proposed plan would have all applicants take a form of civil service examination. This will include a written examination having an intelligence test which shall provide some indication of general and education knowledge. The scores of these tests shall be weighed so that the intelligence test shall make up 25 per cent and other test 75 per cent of the points in the scale allotted to the written examination.

All applicants shall file a transcript of all college credits with their application. The rating scale shall be based on the following factors:

1. Written examination, 50 points.
2. Education, 45 points per year over 2, limit 5 years; 15 points.
3. Experience, 5 points per year, limit 2 years; 10 points.
4. Rating by references (New York school habit rating scale, which includes the habits of attention, neatness, honesty, interest, initiative, ambition, persistence, reliability and stability), 10 points.
5. Rating by Ellwood City interview, which will rate the applicant on the characteristics of appearance, voice, power, command of English, conversational ability, tact, enthusiasm and optimism, definiteness, promptness and self-confidence, 5 points.
6. College credits in semester hours of subject to be taught. (This item shall be determined by dividing the number of college credits in the subject by 5 and multiplying by the average mark as follows: A equals 3, B, 2, C, 1, and all other marks 0. Methods courses in particular subjects shall count as subject credits.) The probable range of this is from 6 to 24.
7. Ellwood City resident given additional 10 points.

Under this plan a local applicant would be given an advantage of ten points of a total possible approximately 125 points. If then his total score was not the highest for the position, he would be dropped in favor of the one having the highest.

Supt. DeLong's opinions and plan met with the approval of the board members. By his own request the board decided to withhold final action until the next meeting, by which time the members will have sufficient time to study and discuss it.

Ellwood Schools

Local Pupils Above Normal
Achievement Tests Show At Schools Here

ELLWOOD CITY, Jan. 12.—Ellwood City public schools are rated above the average school in the United States according to achievement tests given by Superintendent Vaughn R. DeLong in the third, sixth, and eighth grades. These reports were submitted in his monthly report to the Board of Education at its meeting in the Lincoln school last night.

The 3A and 6A test scores were almost identical with those of the second semester tests of last year. The 3A results were splendid especially in arithmetic. The 6A results show the greatest weakness to be in arithmetic, but remedial measures which have begun are expected to show a difference in this field within another year.

The 8A results were especially encouraging, according to Supt. DeLong. At the end of the first semester of last year the 8A pupils were one year behind grade in their achievement. At the end of last year the 8A's were six months behind and the present 8A group is only three months behind. This means that the present 8A group is almost a year ahead of the mid-year class of last year.

The present tests show that the pupils in the local schools are quite a bit above average score for history, geography and literature.

tion Participates In Event;

ELLWOOD CITY, Jan. 12.—In one of the highlight events of graduation week 86 members of the mid-year class of Ellwood high school with the members of the Board of Education and their wives and the high school faculty as special guests assembled in the dining room of the U. P. church for the semi-annual class night dinner and program Thursday. There were 129 present in all.

The room was decorated with a beautiful blue and silver color scheme. Flowers adorned the tables and candy kids were used as favors. After the invocation by Principal J. Ellis Bell, a delicious roast chicken dinner was served by the ladies of the church.

Following this a splendid program was given, over which Charles DeLong, president of the class presided as toastmaster. The capable manner in which he performed this role, would speak well for a veteran. With his wit and humor he kept things going at a merry pace.

The program included a toast to the Senior girls by Walter Fagan to which Miss Cora Cable responded. After a vocal solo by Miss Ruth Lersch and a violin solo by John Kuczmarski, Miss Marybelle Allison gave a toast to the faculty and Board of Education. H. E. Caplan of the faculty responded to this toast.

Board Plans More
CWA Work Here

Projects Would Prolong The Period Of Employment
For 70 Men Report Shows

APPROVAL OF WORK IS EXPECTED SOON

ELLWOOD CITY, Jan. 12.—More CWA projects were approved by the Board of Education of Ellwood City at its monthly meeting in the Lincoln school last night, and were authorized to be presented to Administrator L. B. Round.

Already preliminary plans for the projects are being made, since the board feels that the projects will be approved by the administrator and state officials, as similar ones have been in the county.

The projects as submitted by the building and grounds committee include the building of a new entrance at the Circle school to replace the decaying wooden one; repairing of the third floor in that building; building of a new wall at the Hartman school; and the grading of ground at the North Side and Ewing Park schools for playground purposes. A resolution approving these projects and their cost was presented by the finance committee and passed by the board. A sum of $5,000 was appropriated for this and upon recommendation of the above committee.

This would prolong the period of employment for 70 men who are being used at present on projects provided by the school board. These men were scheduled to have been released by Feb. 15 by which time the work was expected to be completed.

In the meantime work has been progressing splendidly on the projects already approved. It was announced that most of the materials for the work were purchased in this city, with two or three exceptions.

Teaching Vacancies Are Filled
At Last Night's Session
At School

ELLWOOD CITY, Jan. 12.—Considerable time on a discussion for a satisfactory settlement with the tax collector and his bonding company was spent by the Ellwood City Board of Education at its monthly meeting in their rooms of the Lincoln high school last night.

The Maryland Casualty Company which had supplied the bond for former Tax Collector E. B. Moyer, wished to be released of responsibility for his duplicate, which the company stated was an agreement between the board and themselves.

Upon motion of Mr. Mayne the board voted to notify Mr. Moyer to comply with the law in the collection of the remainder of the taxes. That is where taxes are known to be collectable and payment is refused.

It is to collect sums from the employer of the assessed person. It was also decided that the bonding company was to be notified of this action. The finance committee headed by H. M. Cresswell reported that a dividend of over $6,000 has been received from the Citizens National Bank of this city. Later the board took action to appropriate $5,000 of this for CWA work here, since this money had not been included in the school budget.

The resignation of P. L. Ueber former principal of the Central and North Side school was accepted by the board at this time.

The recommendation of Supt. DeLong and the Education committee headed by J. W. Mayne, Arthur Sirriani of this city was elected to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Mrs. Virginia Pike Cox. Mr. Sirriani was the best local qualified applicant and had been substituting in the schools for quite a period. Supt. DeLong announced that he had 502 applications for positions here.

The board also accepted the superintendent and education committee's recommendation of retaining Miss Florence Elie as Acting Principal at the Central school for the remainder of the 1933-34 term at an increase in salary. The election of a principal for the Hartman and Central schools will take place at a later date, Supt. DeLong

NEEDN'T MOVE HOUSE 8 INCHES, SAYS COURT

(International News Service)

DENVER—The Colorado state supreme court settled a long-standing dispute with a decision that Cassell Gulinson did not have to move his house eight inches. Mrs. Ella Sobol bought a home adjoining Gulinson's in 1929, had it surveyed and learned that her neighbor's house projected eight inches onto her property.

Gulinson refused to move it, and Mrs. Sobol took the matter to court. The Denver district court found that a former owner had agreed with Gulinson as to the boundary, and ruled the house should stand where it was. The supreme court upheld the decision.

CAT COME BACK, COULDN'T STAY AWAY

(International News Service)

DENVER—Elaborate plans for rounding up a kidnapping gang were upset when Mrs. Jennie Livermore's cat came home. Reports of a gang of petty abductors who took valuable pets from their owners reached police. When Mrs. Livermore complained that "Corkey" had been stolen and $5 ransom demanded the police laid a trap. Then the cat staggered home under its own power.

Unfortunately, however, so many words have altered during the last
